THE CUBAN QUESTION.

The Relations Between the United States and Spain—Mr. Sickles' Note.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Saturday Review has an article on the subject of the relations between Spain and the United States on the Cuban question. The writer says the announcement that the Washington Government approves the communication of Mr. SICKLES, the American Minister to the Spanish Government, is only partially intelligible as long as the terms of that dispatch are unknown. So also is the announcement that America had no intention to intervene, and was only prompted by humanity. It is certain the Spaniards consider that the subject concerns themselves alone; and if the Government prosecutes the contest with energy and success, no faction will openly oppose its measures.

Prussian Apprehension of War—Armed Vessels Sent to the West Indies.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—In view of the complications between the United States and Spain, the Prussian Government have dispatched vessels of war to the Antilles.

The Sickles Note Not Withdrawn—Reforms in Government and the Conduct of the War Ordered.

MADRID, Oct. 3.—The note of General SICKLES to the Spanish Government in regard to Cuba has not been withdrawn.

A circular is published in the Official Gazette, instructing the Captain-General of Cuba to treat rebel prisoners with humanity, and deal with their offences through the ordinary tribunals, and urging him, at the same time, to push forward reforms in the administration of the island.

European Uneasiness—The Hornet to be Treated as a Pirate—The Case of the Huteryo.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—It is understood in foreign official circles here that several of the European maritime Powers have taken steps which will have an important bearing on the Spanish-Cuban question. One of the statements is that the war ships of these countries have or will be immediately instructed to treat the Hornet as a privateer. The reasoning among the members of the Legations is that, if the Hornet sails under the Cuban flag, the United States must regard and treat her as a pirate, inasmuch as our Government has not yet recognized the belligerent rights of the revolutionists, and that, for a similar reason, she is a pirate to all the European Governments. It is also claimed that if she should sail under the Peruvian flag, the United States must likewise consider her an outlaw, because Peruvian belligerency has not been recognized by us, and because by the terms of the fourteenth article of the Treaty of 1795, we are bound to take this course.

There is official authority for the statement that, in the opinion of the Administration, the Huterpe cannot be stopped. It is argued that any Power with whom we are at peace has the right to buy arms in our market and take them away. The fitting up of military expeditions is altogether a different thing, but the mere purchase of arms and the freighting a ship with them is not regarded as a violation of our Neutrality laws. It is of course well-known everywhere that the guns on board the Huterpe are intended to be put on the Spanish gunboats, and it is understood that our authorities will not, when the time comes, allow the law to be evaded by so apparent a stratagem as the one proposed.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The following correspondence has just been made public:

No. 153 MADISON-LANE, NEW-YORK, Oct. 1, 1869.

To Hamilton Fish, Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.:

On the 2nd ult. we chartered to JOHN PRESCOTT, of this City, the steamship Huterpe, for Havana, to load at Cold Springs with artillery. We are informed by rumor that a pirate is in waiting off Sandy Hook to intercept her. We respectfully inquire what protection in such an event have we from the United States Government. An early answer will much oblige.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) C. H. MALLORY & CO.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, Oct. 2, 1869.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st inst., stating that you are informed by "rumor" that a pirate is in waiting off Sandy Hook to intercept the steamship Huterpe, bound for Havana, and inquiring what protection in such an event the United States Government will afford you. You do not state whether the Huterpe is a registered vessel of the United States; assuming, however, that such is the case, I have to say in reply that while on mere rumor convoy cannot be given to the vessel, the United States will, if a vessel carrying their flag is molested on the high seas, use all their power to punish the offenders, and to prevent a repetition of the offence. I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

HAMILTON FISH.

THE WAR IN CUBA.

Arrival of Spanish Troops.

HAVANA, Oct. 3.—A Spanish steam transport has arrived in port with 1,000 soldiers from Cadiz.

Reported Insubordination in the Cuban Army—The Americans the Victims of Spanish Cruelty and Cuban Assassins.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Letters from Cuba, received here yesterday, confirm previous accounts of the insubordination and treachery in the Cuban army. General CESPEDES and General QUESADA are untiring in their endeavors to harmonize the conflicting elements, but without success. The Americans are anxious to get away. They report that every promise made them before leaving New-York has been violated, and the representations of the state of affairs on the island are equally false. The Americans who have escaped describe the condition of their comrades as most piteous. They are compelled to take the front in all contests, and receive no quarter from the Spaniards. The wounded who in the exigency of the battle are left upon the field are invariably murdered. To this is to be added the almost daily assassinations of their comrades by those whose independence and liberty they were induced to volunteer to assist in securing. Several engagements have taken place, in all of which the Spaniards have been defeated, and in each of which the Americans have lost largely. These fights are stated to have been unimportant in their results as affects the conclusion of the war.

SPAIN.

The Duke of Genoa and the Throne.

MADRID, Oct. 3.—The Liberals, generally, oppose the elevation of the Duke of GENOA to the throne of Spain.

The Republican Revolt—The Cuban Reinforcements.

MADRID, Oct. 3.—Telegraphic communication between Madrid and the Southern provinces is interrupted. It is believed that a Republican insurrection is in progress.

The equipment of a fleet for Cuba is pushed forward with great energy at Cadiz. Light artillery for special service and needle guns are to be sent out.

FRANCE.

Convocation of the Senate and Corps Legislatif.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The Journal Officiel announces that the Senate and Corps Legislatif have been convoked to meet on the 29th of November.

Nearly all the journals express dissatisfaction at the fact that the Chambers have not been immediately assembled.

Prince Napoleon's Reply to the American Address—Political Sentiment Identical with that of America.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Prince NAPOLEON has written a letter to Colonel BURTON, Chairman, and other Americans sojourning in London, thanking them for their address congratulating him on his liberal speech in the Senate. The Prince reminds them of the bonds which have always united France and America, and continues: "The present position bears resemblance to that at the close of the last century. France seeks to found a liberal democracy at the moment when America emerges from a gigantic struggle for the distinction of slavery, which dishonored the Republic. The methods of France and America are different, but the end is the same. Constitutional liberty, established in France, will place the political sentiments of France and America in as complete accord as their interests already are." In conclusion, the Prince thanks his American friends for having perceived in his speech, moderate, liberal, and democratic sentiments, which alone can secure the end at which they aim—the alliance of the Empire with liberty.

GREAT BRITAIN.

A Potato Disease in England—A New Governor of Newfoundland.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The potato crop of England will not be up to the average. It is estimated that half of the crop of Cumberland is diseased.

Colonel HILL has been appointed Governor of Newfoundland.

Loss of an English Ship.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 2.—Intelligence has been received here to the effect that the ship A. L. Palmer, Captain KAYE, from this port Aug 20, for New-York, has been abandoned at sea.

ROME.

The French Occupation—A Contradiction—The Ecumenical Council.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The Patrie contradicts a report that the French troops are to retire from Rome on the 15th of November.

The Figaro says M. DUPANLOUP, Bishop of Orleans, will defend liberal ideas before the Ecumenical Council, and that fifty American Bishops give him their support.

THE WAR IN PARAGUAY.

The Capture of Asuarra by the Allies—The Paraguayan Loss.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Late advices have been received from Buenos Ayres. It seems that President LOPEZ, in evacuating Asuarra, removed everything, including his guns. During the pursuit 30,000 Allies attacked 3,000 Paraguayans. The latter fought desperately. The engagement lasted six hours. The Paraguayans lost 2,000 men and all their archives and specie.

The Losses of the Brazilians—Reported Withdrawal of the Allies—The Brazilians Accused of Assassinating Prisoners.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Advices from Paraguayan sources represent that the losses of the Brazilians in their last battles amounted to 8,000 men. President LOPEZ retired to the Grand Cordilleras and thence to Acquisa, where he had in advance prepared new positions for his forces. The Allies were preparing to withdraw from Paraguay, but would leave a few troops behind to support the Provisional Government established at Asuncion. The Argentine Government had already recalled its contingent to the Allied army in Paraguay. The Buenos Ayres journals accuse the Brazilians of assassinating their prisoners.

CANADA.

Reception of Prince Arthur at Toronto—Acquittal of Bellanger, who Shot His Wife's Paramour.

TORONTO, Ontario, Oct. 3.—Prince ARTHUR, the Governor-General and the Royal party arrived here by the Great Western Railway at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Addresses were presented by the Corporation. The streets were gorgeously decorated, and the illuminations were on a very extensive scale. Last night the Prince reviewed the volunteers in the drill shed, and afterwards presented the prizes won at the recent rifle match.

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—The trial of BELLANGER, for the murder of LA BONTE, his wife's paramour, terminated last night. The jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." The Judge expressed his approval of the verdict.

THE ECLIPSE IN SIBERIA.

Return of the Government Expedition—Interesting Report of the Commander of the United States Steamer Mohican.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Dispatches have been received at the Navy Department from Rear Admiral TURNER, commanding the Pacific Squadron, which give some interesting particulars of the natural phenomena during the recent eclipse in Siberia. The report is from Commander FRANKLIN, of the Mohican. He sailed from San Francisco on the 20th of June, having on board Professor HALL and Mr. ROGERS, of the Hydrographic Office, Washington. He says: "After a passage of thirty-one days from San Francisco, I arrived in Plover Bay. The astronomers went ashore, and selected a site for an observatory. During the first five or six days of our stay the weather was gloomy and overcast, and most unpromising for the work in which we were engaged, but on the evening of the 6th of August, the eve of the eclipse day, it cleared up and gave promise of a fair day to the astronomers. On the morning of the 9th the sun rose bright and clear, and our hopes were high that all the circumstances would be as favorable as could be desired, but just about the commencement of the eclipse, clouds began to form and it remained cloudy during its continuance, even up to the end, when it again cleared off and remained clear for the rest of the day. The clouds were not of such a character, however, as to entirely obscure the phenomenon, but we were enabled to see the eclipse from time to time through them, and during its totality had very fine views. For the purpose of science, however, I do not think that the weather was sufficiently clear to make the observations of the astronomers of much avail. As some account of the eclipse and the appearance of the surroundings during its continuance may not be uninteresting to you, I will give you the benefit of such notes as I made at the time, which apply more particularly, however, to the few moments of totality. It commenced about 8:45, mean local time, on the right upper edge of the sun, and, although the weather was cloudy, we were enabled from time to time to get a glimpse of it through the openings in the clouds, and thus mark its course as it advanced. At about 9:45 the darkening became very apparent, and before the sun was entirely obscured, the sea-birds around us had gone to roost. The darkness came upon us very suddenly, the clouds opposite the sun from having been a light ashy color became suddenly black as the blackest storm-clouds, those under the sun and in the direction of the Arctic sea assumed a whitish hue which might have been produced by the reflection from the snow and ice of that region, while those to seaward took up an orange and yellow tint. The sea assumed the color of the deepest indigo, and the whole scene in its effect upon the sky and sea and surrounding hills was sublime, beyond anything of which I can convey an idea; nothing could present to the mind an idea of more utter desolation. There was but one star visible, on account of the overcast condition of the sky. The dames of the sun were distinctly visible, and three fiery lumps could be observed on the edge of the moon during the totality, resembling molten iron. The darkness, which continued for a few moments only, was not complete, and passed away as suddenly as it came, and indeed it seemed to me that the transition from darkness to light was more rapid than that from light to darkness; soon everything assumed the appearance it had before the totality, and the eclipse finished at about 11 A. M., mean local time."

THE GOLD PANIC.

The Rumored Connection of the President Denied—Jim Fisk Rebuffed—The Order to Sell Gold.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—As comments have been made in the newspapers affecting the Administration in connection with the recent gold panic, and much interest is felt on the subject, the Washington Agent of the Associated Press to-night called upon the President to ascertain whether there was any foundation for insinuations or direct charges against the Administration. The President conversed with the utmost frankness on the subject, and said he had not thought proper to publicly contradict the statements concerning himself, as he had done nothing whatever to influence the money market or to afford any advantages to private parties. While in New-York he had many voluntary advisers but he repeatedly said to them that the Administration always held itself in a position to act as it seemed best, and free to make any change of policy for public interest. In the course of the conversation he stated that while on the eve of going to Newport, JAMES FISK, Jr., came on board the steamer at New-York and said to the President that GOULD had sent him down to ask that he would privately give them a little intimation as to what the Administration was going to do on the financial question. The President replied that the giving of any such information would not be fair, and asked FISK whether he did not think so himself. FISK admitted it would not be fair. The President then informed him that whenever the Administration was going to change its action or policy, the Secretary of the Treasury would give notice through the newspapers as usual, so that everybody might at the same time know what it was, thus excluding any possible charge of favoritism. On the morning of the panic, Friday week, Secretary BOUTWELL communicated to the President the situation of affairs in New-York, when the President said, "Sell five millions of gold." The Secretary replied that he had come for the purpose of suggesting a sale of three millions; the idea of selling gold thus appearing to be in the mind of each at the same time. A few minutes thereafter the order was telegraphed to New-York to sell four millions of gold. It may be repeated that the President had informed no one whomsoever of the purpose of the Administration on financial subjects, and the same remark is equally true of the Secretary of the Treasury.

NEWS FROM THE WEST.

A Camp of Indians Surprised—One Killed—A Shock of Earthquake in Utah.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 3.—Omaha dispatches say intelligence from the expedition under General DUNCAN, who with the Fifth Cavalry left Fort McPherson about ten days ago for the Republican River, has been received. The troops surprised a camp of fifty-six lodges, last Sunday, and drove them away, capturing a large quantity of camp equipage. The Indians lost one killed and several wounded.

A dispatch from Fillmore, Utah, dated the 1st inst., says: "At 6:30 o'clock this evening a violent shock of earthquake was felt here. It passed from south to north, apparently in a direct line. The State House rocked and tumbled for five or ten seconds. Then the shock gradually subsided into trembling and distant rumbling. The windows, doors, cupboards and furniture of the dwelling houses in the city rattled. It is said to have been the most violent shock that has been felt in this part of Utah since its first settlement. The shock and trembling altogether lasted two minutes."

THE DISASTER AT INDIANAPOLIS.

Later Details of the Catastrophe—Twenty Lives Lost.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 3.—The Coroner gives the number killed at the Fair Ground on Friday, including two wounded, who have since died, at twenty. There is still one body at Weaver's undertaker's office that has not been recognized, and the head and some fragments of flesh of another body. JOHN LORINE, of Franklin, Ind., died at the City Hospital yesterday, and J. A. MCVEY, from the country, near this city, at the Surgical Institute to-day. One of the bodies at Weaver's is supposed to be JOHN STACK, of Rob Roy, Ind. Nine of the dead were buried here to-day. Two or three more of the wounded are in a very critical condition, and will probably not recover. As near as can be ascertained between fifty and sixty persons were wounded. The Coroner's jury is still in session, and will not, probably, render a verdict for several days. It has been definitely ascertained that no females were killed except one girl, Miss DAWSON, 12 years old. Several ladies, badly wounded, are still at the hospital.

Accident in an Illinois Mine—Four Men Badly Injured.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—An accident occurred in the Gardner Coal Mine, at Gardner, Ill., last evening. Four persons were descending the shaft when the wire hoisting-rope broke, and the men fell with the cage a distance of 180 feet to the bottom of the shaft. None were killed outright, though all had bones broken. One had about 15 years of age has since died, and two others are supposed to be beyond recovery.

Arrest of a Silk Robber in Boston—A Singular Vitriol Assault—The Recent Wife-Beating Case.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—CHARLES MAY, implicated with others in robbing the store of JOHN STEVENS, No. 222 Washington-street, several months ago, of silks and shawls valued at $2,000, was arrested last night. He is an old offender.

PATRICK O'NEIL, a stevedore, has lost the sight of both his eyes from vitriol, thrown in his face by MARY MCCARTY. The latter was also shockingly burned by the fluid sputtering in her own face. MARY alleges that O'NEIL denied the paternity of her child. She will be tried for the assault.

The charges against THOMAS BRENNING for beating his wife to death, have been fully sustained by the Coroner's inquest. The testimony showed the deceased to be a sober and industrious woman. BRENNING confesses he murdered her because she refused him money to buy rum.

WASHINGTON.

The Randall-Legate-Pomeroy Letter—A New American-Mexican Financial and Land Scheme.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Mr. CORNELIUS WENDELL was written to some time ago by a Western editor for some definite information relative to the Pomeroy-Randall-Legate letter. The following answer has been sent in reply:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21, 1869.

To W. S. Burke, Esq., Editor Leavenworth Bulletin:

SIR: Returning from the North, I find yours of the 7th inst., containing a copy of a letter from Senator POMEROY, &c., as published in your paper. In reply, I can say that a letter, of which you inclose a copy, was brought to me by LEGATE as from Senator POMEROY, and that I then believed, and still do believe, that it was authentic, and the said letter was used by me to further LEGATE's political aspirations.

Yours, hastily, C. WENDELL.

A NEW FINANCIAL SCHEME.

There is some talk in monied circles here of a vast financial scheme of a semi-political character, bearing directly on American and Mexican affairs, which is now in course of organization. Large land and railroad interests are also involved, and the names of two or three eminent financiers are spoken of in connection with these transactions.

BALTIMORE FLOODED.

Heavy Rain Storm—Repetition of the July Flood Apprehended—Alarm Bells Ringing—Removal of Goods.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 3—Midnight.—A rain storm increased in violence about 9 P. M., and continues unabated, with every indication of another flood in that portion of the city submerged last July. The fire bells are now sounding general alarm. Harrison-street, from Gay to Baltimore, is flooded, as also the vicinity of the Middle District Police Station. The stores on Gay, Harrison and other streets are lighted up, and the merchants removing the goods. The rise at present is caused by back water from the sewers. Jones Falls Creek has risen two feet within the past hour. The water at present is about three feet below the banks, and is rising rapidly.

POLITICAL.

The New-England Labor Reform League—The Sessions in Worcester, Mass.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 3.—The New-England Labor Reform League commenced its sessions yesterday and continued until this evening. The attendance has been small at all the meetings, and few of the "distinguished speakers" advertised to be present made their appearance. JOHN OWENS, of West Roxbury, was chosen President, and the officers were all of Massachusetts.

The Convention adjourned to meet in Providence on the 16th and 17th instant.

The Legislature of Virginia—The Senatorship.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 3.—About fifty members of the Legislature have arrived here. Very few, if any, are committed to support candidates for the United States Senate, and all seem to be waiting for a caucus to determine the matter. The names chiefly mentioned by the Walker men to-night for Senator are FRANKLIN STEARNS, General ROBERT WILLIAMS and Lieutenant-Governor JOHN F. LEWIS. A caucus of Walker men will be held to-morrow night to nominate officers of the Legislature. EPHRAIM TURNER and JOHN B. CRENSHAW are spoken of for Speaker of the House. The Senatorial election will not take place until the end of the week.

Texas—Recruits for A. J. Hamilton.

GALVESTON, Texas, Oct. 2.—Provisional Governor PEASE sent in his resignation yesterday, and will take the stump for HAMILTON. The action of General REYNOLDS and the Administration regarding Texas affairs will cause twenty more Republican speakers to take the field for the Hamilton ticket. Preparations are being made for a grand Hamilton demonstration here to-morrow.

The Mississippi Campaign.

MEMPHIS, Oct. 3.—A special dispatch from Grenada, Miss., says: "Judge DENT, in a speech there yesterday, in reply to General ALCORN, said GRANT was in favor of his election, and had told him he hoped he would be elected."

Nomination of Hamilton in New-Jersey.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—At a mass convention held at Chew's Landing, Camden County, N. J., JAMES M. SCOVEL was nominated for State Senator by acclamation. All the townships were represented.

FIRES.

Destruction of a Factory in San Francisco—Fire and Explosion in Pawtucket, R. I.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—The furniture, cotton and frame factories on Fourth, near Berry-street, were burned to-day. The loss is $200,000, which is partially covered by insurance.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 3.—The shop of L. & P. L. EMERSON, in Dexter-street, Pawtucket, was burned Saturday night. The boiler of a steam engine exploded while the machine was going to this fire, slightly injuring several persons. The explosion was downward, or a sad loss of life would have resulted.

Bank Robbery in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Yesterday, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon, some person entered the banking house of CLARK & ULMAN, and went behind the counter, entered the vault, and took a trunk containing securities amounting to $135,000. The robbery was not discovered until some two hours after. Fortunately none of the property taken can be made available to the burglar.

New-Orleans and Ship Island Canal.

NEW-ORLEANS, Oct. 3.—The work of excavating for the New-Orleans and Ship Island Canal commenced yesterday about a mile above Carrollton. Mr. BLATT, the President, dug the first dirt and delivered a brief address. Speeches were also made by Governor WARMOUTH, Lieut.-Governor DUNN and others. A contract has been made with a dredging company to excavate the canal from the Mississippi River to Chef Menteur.

Probable Murder in Philadelphia—A Man Stabbed to the Heart.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—JOHN HUGHES, aged 40 years, was found dead, corner of Twenty-third and Chestnut streets, this morning, stabbed to the heart. There is no clue to the murderers.

Death of Rev. Dr. Skinner of Utica.

From the Utica Observer, Oct. 2.

We are pained to announce the death of our estimable fellow-citizen, Rev. DOLPHUS SKINNER, D. D., which took place at his residence at 6 o'clock this morning. He had been suffering from a painful disease for several months, and his decease was not unexpected. His age was nearly 66, but he retained his vigor of body and mind unimpaired until the commencement of the attack which terminated his life. His consciousness remained to the last, and he died in perfect resignation and peace. Among his last words, in reply to an observation of his wife, he said: "My work is done; God is calling me—calling me."

Dr. SKINNER was a native of New-England, where he began his ministry, but he removed to Utica at an early date, and had been a resident here about forty years. He was, from the beginning, a zealous defender of the Universalist faith, and soon became, and continued to his death, a leader in his denomination.

THE STATE TICKET.

General Robinson Recommended for Secretary of State.

From the Binghamton Republican, Oct. 1.

The name of GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, as candidate for Secretary of State, will be withdrawn. A card from Mr. CURTIS, peremptorily declining the nomination, is published under our telegraph head. The State Committee, in accordance with the custom in such cases, will name another for the first place on the ticket.

We suggest to the Committee that it would recognize the wishes of Republicans in this section of the State, and have the very cordial if not unanimous approval of the Republicans of the whole State, if it tender the nomination to General JOHN C. ROBINSON, of Broome. General ROBINSON is, to say the least, better qualified for the office of Secretary of State than that of State Engineer and Surveyor. His name was the only other one proposed in the Convention for the highest place, and there is no doubt that the previous pledges of the delegates, more than their preference at the time of voting, for the admirable nomination that was made, gave the expression of the Convention for Mr. CURTIS.

The popular strength of the ticket will be as great with the change proposed, as it would be without change. The nomination would have, in many quarters, a more enthusiastic support. General ROBINSON's distinguished record is more or less familiar to the people of every State, and particularly to the citizens of his own State. His long and honorable service of thirty years in nearly every section of the Union; his active part in several battles of the brilliant campaign of General TAYLOR in Mexico; his engagements against hostile Indians; and his participation in the late war, beginning with the occupation of Fort McHenry, where he was in command; afterward commanding all the forces at Portsmouth Grove, fighting in the battles of the Orchard, Savage's Station, Glendale, Malvern Hill, Bristoe Station, Fredericksburg, Chancellorville, Gettysburg, Mine Run, Michaels', the Wilderness and Spottsylvania; in the last-named battle making the famous charge against LONGSTREET's corps, at the head of his division, in which his limb was lost—together place his name with those of the foremost heroes of the war. We believe the Republican Party of this State has no man whom it could make its standard-bearer with greater honor to itself, or better prospect of success. His services in reconstruction at the South, his administration in semi-civil duty, in many capacities, and his tastes and culture, would add lustre to the creditable performance of the duty of Secretary of State, if he should be elected to that office.

The new ticket would rally the soldiers as the other might not; it would lose nothing that with Mr. CURTIS at the head it could gain; and as General ROBINSON is one of the most prominent and active Republicans of the State, a step would be taken that must fully compensate for the ill effects of Mr. CURTIS' declination.

In making the suggestion that General ROBINSON now be named for the State Department, we appeal to our brethren of the Press, who, as the people's more immediate representatives, bear this matter in their hands. The State Committee will be glad to have their expression.

A FORTUNE-HUNTER IN TROUBLE.

Arrest of the Baron de Riviere—How He Captured an Heiress and Took Her to South America—She Charges Him with Swindling Her Out of $7,500.

The celebrated "Baron" HENRI DE RIVIERE, whose attempted marriage with a belle of Mobile and subsequent marriage with Miss BLUNT, the daughter of a wealthy Southern lawyer, together with certain guano speculations and shooting affairs, have acquired for him some notoriety, was arrested at the New-York Hotel on Saturday night, just as he was going to dinner, by Deputy Sheriffs LAWRENCE DELMAR and JOHN E. MCGOWAN. The charge against him is a very serious one. It appears from the statement of Mlle. HELENE STILLE, a wealthy and beautiful Parisian lady, that some years since DE RIVIERE met her in Paris, and representing himself as an unmarried man, (although he has a wife and two children living,) and also pretending that he was a French nobleman of fortune, induced her, after selling her estates in France, to accompany him as his wife to South America. There they traveled in great state, and the expenses were all defrayed with the proceeds of the lady's property. After spending some time in Lima, Peru, they returned to Paris. Finally she learned that his wife was living, and he left her. He came to this City, and she followed him. Learning a few days ago that he was staying for a short time at the New-York Hotel, she sought the advice of a lawyer, and obtained from Justice DOWLING a warrant for DE RIVIERE's arrest upon subscribing to the following affidavit:

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.—Helene Stille, plaintiff, vs. The Baron Henri de Riviere, defendant.—City and County of New-York, ss.: Helene Stille, of said City, being duly sworn, says that she is the above-named plaintiff, and that she has a good cause of action against said defendant for wrongful conversion and unlawful detention of personal property arising on the following facts, namely: In the Summer of 1866, in Paris, the French Empire, the above-named defendant, then giving himself out to be a French nobleman of princely fortune, and then representing himself to be an unmarried man, but being in truth, as deponent has since discovered, then a married man, and a common plebeian swindler and common chevalier d'industrie, by divers arts, devices, false pretences and allurements gained this plaintiff's affections and confidence, and did by fair, wicked and fraudulent devices, delude this plaintiff and induce her and induce her to live and cohabit with him as his wife; and having thus basely obtained possession over her and won her confidence, did, by trick and device, induce this plaintiff to deposit with him, for safe keeping, on the 26th day of October, 1866, at the City of Paris, in France, the sum of 37,500 francs, in gold coin, and of the value of $7,500 of American money, belonging to this deponent; and said defendant, then and there, promised and undertook to return said property to this deponent on request. And this deponent says that having accordingly said defendant's real character, she demanded the restoration to her of said property, and deponent says that said defendant, especially since, when said defendant absconded from France and is now in this City, and wholly refuses to return said amount of $7,500 to deponent, or any part thereof; but said defendant has wrongfully converted said property to his own use, and now unlawfully detains the same from this deponent at said City of New-York, and is now, as deponent is informed and verily believes, about to quit this City, said defendant having taken passage in a boat bound for the New-York Hotel, in this City. And deponent says she has commenced an action in this honorable Court against said defendant for the wrongful conversion and unlawful detention aforesaid, and that said defendant is now truly and justly indebted to this deponent in the sum of $7,500, which amount the said defendant has wrongfully converted to his own use and unlawfully detains from this deponent, at said City of New-York, and deponent lastly says that said defendant is a bad and unprincipled adventurer, and has cheated and defrauded deponent of said sum of $7,500; wherefore this deponent prays that said defendant may be arrested and held to bail in the sum of $15,000.

HELENE STILLE.

Sworn to before me this 1st day of October, 1869.—ABM. H. HUMMEL, Notary Public, New-York County.

If the charges against DE RIVIERE are fully substantiated, it is likely that his travels will not extend much further for some time to come. DE RIVIERE several years ago shot at BILLY MULLIGAN, the pugilist, in a Broadway saloon. After his marriage with Miss BLUNT he delivered a lecture in this City on "Love." He was intimate with LOLA MONTEZ. His career has been a somewhat eventful one.

Another Bull Panic.

Lively excitement was caused in the vicinity of Printing House Square last evening by the appearance of a mad bull, followed at a respectful distance by a crowd of several hundred men and boys. The animal dashed rapidly and furiously through Nassau and adjacent streets, but finally came to a short halt in Wall-street. Apparently not regarding that street as a good neighborhood for bulls generally, the frantic beast retraced its steps in the direction of the City Hall, pursued by a large posse of policemen. Numerous pistol shots were fired at the bull, who was finally killed in Chambers-street, near the intersection of Chatham-street, after having fallen down from sheer exhaustion. It was understood that the beast belonged to an up-town slaughter house. So far as could be ascertained only two persons were hurt, and they not seriously. These persons were JULIA BYRNES, aged 37 years, who was trampled down at the corner of New-Bowery and New-Chambers-street, and LAWRENCE GILLEN, aged 11 years, who was tossed out of the way in front of his home, No. 5 Mission-place.

But the animal came very near causing many tragedies through the recklessness of his pursuers. In the upper part of Chatham-street several shots were fired at him, which, as a matter of course, missed their aim and came near hitting persons in the vicinity. One ball passed through a street-car, just grazing the cheek of a passenger, and other narrow escapes were reported.

A third case of injury was reported in that of MICHAEL DONOVAN, No. 20 Oak-street, who was knocked down in Chatham-square, receiving severe bruises, but no serious injury.

At a late hour of the night the Second Precinct reported that JOHN ANDERSON, a sailor belonging to the schooner William Gillen, lying at the foot of Beekman-street, was shot in South-street by some one who fired at the bull. The ballet lodged in his lung, and the wound is considered dangerous. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

We have been requested to say that one JAMES FISHER, a lawyer of this City, mentioned recently in connection with a divorce case, is not Mr. JAMES W. FISHER, of No. 161 Broadway.

THE FALL TRADE.

Brisk Business and Cheering Prospects.

THE SOUTHERN TRADE TREBLED.

Western Cities Competing with New-York.

Effect of the Gold Excitement—What is Doing in Dry Goods, Clothing, Boots and Shoes, and Other Lines.

Speaking generally, the late excitement in Wall-street has had very little effect on the present Fall trade prospects. The City was full of buyers from all points when the speculative mania was at its highest, and with the exception of the dry-goods business no branch of trade seemed to be affected by it. This line is more sensitive than any other to changes of the financial barometer, because of its sympathy with the ruling rates for cotton, which are to a very great extent regulated by the price of gold. In the other lines of trade dealers affirm that no material change is apparent that can be traced to the gold excitement. Some few buyers perhaps did not purchase as extensively as they would have done had there been no flare-up in Wall-street; but as the season will doubtless be a long one, these will supplement their purchases by orders for further supplies when the financial atmosphere shall have regained its wonted serenity.

A marked feature of trade, this Fall, is the increase of Southern buyers and the demand very generally among them for first-class goods. In nearly every branch of business this increase is noticeable, and is a cheering index of the recuperative process going on in the Southern States. The clothing business here is beginning to be affected by Western competition, and the general opinion is that the trade with New-York in this particular line reached its acme in 1868.

DRY GOODS.

The trade this year commenced somewhat late, owing to the tendency, more and more perceptible every year, to delay obtaining supplies until they are actually wanted, and this is encouraged by increased facilities of transportation. The South and Southwest were first in market, and they were the most important purchasers, due to the large compensation obtained for the cotton crop which, this year, was received by the planters themselves. The year before, they sold their cotton at low prices so that brokers and others availed themselves of the subsequent large advance. The South was bare of goods, and were liberal purchasers, not, however, on a scale that partook in the least of speculation.

At the time of the raid upon Wall-street the City was well filled with customers from all parts of the Union, and there was a good prospect of a satisfactory season. But the affair in Wall-street came with such suddenness and severity that many customers, unable to fathom the extent of the disaster, suddenly left the City, and others whose visits are seldom omitted made light purchases at Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Memphis and other distributing points conveniently reached. The trade has fallen off in volume about thirty per cent, and there has been some decline in cotton goods in sympathy with the fall of cotton which took place. As, however, the country is not yet supplied, the season will be lengthened beyond what is usual. Many dealers suppose that the relaxation which is now going on, in the recent severe demand for money in Wall-street to carry stocks at high prices, will have the effect ultimately to make the trade of the season active.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

The number of buyers in this branch of trade is unusually large, especially from the South and West. The number of home buyers is about the same as last year. About four weeks ago the rush hither of Southern and Western merchants began, and it very soon became patent to prominent wholesalers in the City that the trade for this season promised to be more than usually brisk; and at this writing it is much better than it was last Fall. The stocks in market were quite large when the business set in; but, in many instances, this supply had to be supplemented by new manufactures, in order to meet the large and constantly increasing demands that were made upon the principal houses. A noticeable fact in connection with this trade is the vast increase of orders from the South, which are now far in advance of those of any year since the war. For the Southern market, too, a better quality of goods is demanded than has usually been asked for to supply that region. An instance of this may be mentioned. A prominent wholesale house in Murray-street received, the other day, an order from a firm in Savannah to the following effect: "Gents: Send us on, as soon as possible, twelve cases of brogans, men's wear. Be sure and send the best quality, for, as every negro in this neighborhood expects to go to Congress, none others are salable." There is no material deviation from the price-list that obtained last year, so far as sales have been made this season. It is probable, however, that prices will be affected before the season closes, in consequence of the stand that is being taken by the Knights of St. Crispin, in the ranks of which organization nearly all the journeymen shoemakers of the country are enrolled. The Knights threaten to demand an increase of prices, in which case the manufacturers will be compelled to accede, as there are now large orders for goods outstanding, and the stocks in market are rather short. In several shops the men have already struck for the advanced prices, and have obtained them. A few houses are yet holding out against the strike, but must eventually succumb, or else allow their orders to go unfilled. The Western trade is very large, although not equal to the Southern demand. The styles of goods sent to the West generally are also an improvement on those of former years. In fact, first-class work is asked for in every market. The increase of Western trade is attributable in great part to the low charge for freights, a matter that invariably tends to bring to this City large orders for goods. The business will probably remain brisk till about the middle of next December. The home trade has increased over that of last year, and good prices are generally obtained.

CLOTHING.

The home demand for clothing this season is fair, though not in advance of last Fall; if anything it is less urgent. The Southern trade is looking up remarkably; sales, in most cases, being made on the strength of the coming cotton crop, which will bring payments generally into January, 1870. This increase of Southern trade is more observable in this branch of business than in any other. A better class of goods is being shipped to the South than ever before, and payments for the last season's sales are coming in with exceeding promptness—the complaint of a scarcity of money, which has, for some years past, been chronic in that section, being now seldom made by purchasers. Prices range about the same as last year. If there can be a comparative average struck in this respect it must be at a lower figure, if any change be made at all, than the ruling rate for 1868. Although the sales to the West for this season are about equal, in the aggregate, to those of last year, the profits thereon are a trifle less. This arises from the fact that a serious competition has grown up lately between the Western cities and New-York. Large clothing houses have been established in Chicago, Cincinnati and other places, from which the retailers of the West are solicited to draw their supplies; and as these new establishments have marked down their goods to the New-York standard, the wholesalers here have been compelled to come down still lower, in order to induce purchases. Were it not that freights are remarkably low, the Western trade with this City would not be so good as it was in 1868. In respect to the South the case is widely different. Orders from that section are coming in briskly, and generally first-class goods only are in demand. The Southern trade is now treble that of any year since the war. Payments from the West for last season's purchases are generally about a month behind-hand, while the Southern purchasers are liquidating with commendable promptness. Large amounts of money are now required, however, to move the crops; when this is accomplished, settlements with Western purchasers, it is expected, will be promptly made. The prospect for a good Spring trade, especially with the South, is extremely flattering. So far as the Western trade is concerned, however, the competition which has grown up in the Western cities has rendered the hold of our New-York merchants upon it very insecure; and if steps are not taken to give the occidental dealers extra inducements for laying in their supplies here, the probability is that very few of them will be found hereafter in the New-York market.

HATS AND CAPS.

Until quite lately this trade has been remarkably dull; but within a few weeks past it has taken a favorable tur

THE OHIO VALLEY.

The Quietude of the Times—The Immense Crops—Effects on Business—Great Increase of Manufactures in Cincinnati—Prosperity of the Country.

THE BEECHES, Wednesday, Sept. 22, 1869.

The deep green which still hangs over the Beeches, the hot sun above, and the lazy atmosphere around, no more denotes the stillness and quietude of nature than do the outward signs of commerce and business denote the quietude of business in the Ohio Valley, and yet both are in a very important sense deceptive. There lies behind them both a mighty growth and progress, which the eye and ear scarcely detect, but which statistics do and will show on a grand scale. For example, while I sit under the Beeches, and all seems quiet, there comes from a distance off, the sort of curious purring noise which is the peculiar sound of the threshing machine. Day after day it goes on and I begin to inquire, What can my neighbor be at with such an everlasting threshing? I inquire, and I find that he has raised thirty bushels of wheat per acre, and in our country that is a most extraordinary crop, and I find a man in this valley who has twenty bushels per acre thinks he has been very unfortunate. Now, you may take this fact as an index to the whole. I will give you more, but let me stop here and take a little note of that threshing machine. We make reapers and mowers and threshers in Ohio by the tens of thousands. We make the machines and use them too. Now this fact is a sort of index to progress. A few years ago the flail only was used.

READ, who exceeds all poets in the description of Western scenery, says:

"The gray herns looking from their hazy hills,
O'er the dim waters widening in the vales,
Sent down the air a greeting to the mills,
On the dull thunder of alternate flails."

This was the old way of threshing, and what would Ohio do with flails this year? It would take a year to thresh the wheat. The fact is the entire Western country, and particularly the Central West, has an immense crop of wheat, and unless there can be found an outlet for it abroad prices must rule low and a great surplus remain over for another year. But Europe always wants food, and at low prices will consume greatly more than is usually done.

But how of other crops? Oats and hay are also immense crops. But there has been a common idea that the corn crop will be short. I do not think so; and there will probably be a great disappointment for those who are speculating on a short crop of corn. It is true that the upland clay soil will have small crops, but the great crop of corn is never raised on such lands. It is raised on the black soil of alluvial lands. Now these lands will produce nearly or quite an average crop. I rode out a few days since in one of our most productive crop valleys and I did not find any material falling off. On the contrary, I think the alluvial lands will produce a full average crop. I suspect that, notwithstanding the complaints of drought, there is really in this country an average crop of corn. But if you have an average crop of this grain and an immense surplus of all others, where are you? Why, all the barns, cribs and stacks on the continent will hardly hold your grain. Is this a calamity? If not, why do the Democratic politicians utter the lamentations of Jeremiah over the state of the country? The truth is, former merchants and bankers have been praying for this very state of things, and now they have got it shall they lament over it? The Democratic orators have mistaken their key-note altogether, and the sooner they join the Republicans in rejoicing over the prosperity of the country the better for them. Mourners in the house of feasting are not very acceptable.

Well, what effect will this have on business? A very simple one; agriculture and mining are the only source of production. Merchants, manufacturers, bankers, agents and professions must make their whole profits out of agriculture and mining. The larger the crops, therefore, the more people to handle them; the more people to sell them; the more to buy them; the more to profit by them; the cheaper the food for the manufacturer. In one word, the greater the amount of agricultural productions, the greater the volume of business. This is an inevitable result. There never was more business done in this country than in the past year, and if nothing extraordinary happens the volume of business in the coming current year will be larger than was ever known in this country. If, then, politicians and speculators complain of dull times they will only be laughed at for their pains. But, they refer, doubtless, to their own condition, and it must be acknowledged that times are rather dull in politics and speculation. And what does that indicate? Simply a state of extraordinary prosperity, in which the people are neither alarmed nor excited about the state of public affairs. But let us take another striking evidence of solid prosperity. Cincinnati is not only the metropolitan city of the West, but is especially the great centre of manufactures. Surrounded by cheap coal, cheap iron and cheap food, with the Ohio River and railroads to all points of the compass, it must necessarily be a great manufacturing place—probably in the end the greatest in the country. Well, the war was certainly a backset to Cincinnati manufactures, for a large part of her market was in the South. Well, how is it now with the manufactures of Cincinnati? Have they fallen short of the progress of the country? So far from it, that the increase of manufactures in Cincinnati is unprecedented. The Board of Trade have recently attempted to get the amount of manufacturing products, but have succeeded in only a part, on account of the secretiveness of many manufacturers. But they got some leading branches in all those, which make about one-third of those taken in the census of 1860. This third shows an increase of 180 per cent.! Enough is known to show that the total value of manufactured products and mechanical arts must amount to about one hundred and ten millions of dollars!

In the course of 1870 New-York and Philadelphia will be the only cities which will exceed Cincinnati in manufactures. But I am not writing of Cincinnati so much as of the Ohio Valley. I hear that Louisville also is very prosperous. Indiana is making numerous railroads. The new railroad bridge connecting with the Little Miami Railroad, and on the line from Philadelphia to Memphis, is also rapidly building. The surveys for the Southern Railroad are going through Kentucky. In one word, the whole Valley of the Ohio is in a state of rapid progress and high prosperity. But notwithstanding this, GEORGE PENDLETON, Esq., has just uttered his lamentations over the sad state of the country! Is it not lamentable that the country should be in a state of health, peace and prosperity? Is it not hard that GRANT's Administration should pay off $50,000,000 of public debt—just when the Democrats don't want it done? Mr. PENDLETON says there are great numbers of people on "the verge of hopeless bankruptcy." There is a hint for your New-York bankers. Let them send commercial detectives and find out these gentlemen on the verge of hopeless bankruptcy.

I should first examine the condition of Mr. PENDLETON's friends. They have long been politically bankrupt, and they may be so commercially. I see no signs of their coming up to par, and the best thing they can do is to take the benefit of the Bankrupt act. But I have given reasons enough why the people, like the atmosphere, should now present an appearance of stillness and quietude. Contentment is never boisterous. The clear sun of prosperity is not like the dark cloud of adversity—carried on and driven by fierce winds. The farmers are threshing their barns. The mechanic is in his workshop, and the manufacturer is busy. All are active and prosperous. In walking through Cincinnati you will find all at work and active. But it is true, the stores are quiet, and not very full of people. The merchants must bide their time, and that is near at hand, for the heavy clouds will not more certainly give forth rain than the immense crops of the country will produce activity in commerce, and energy in all kinds of business. First comes the farmer, then the manufacturer, then the merchant, and they are mutually dependent on each other. The signs of the times are auspicious for all of them; and no country in the world ever had a better prospect of peace and happiness.

A VETERAN OBSERVER.

The Harvest in Canada—Favorable Reports.

From the Montreal Witness, Oct. 1.

The report of the harvest of 1869, in the different sections of the country through which the Grand Trunk passes, has just been received. The grand result, namely, that Canada is blessed this year with, upon the whole, an excellent crop, is already known to our readers. Wheat varies from fifteen to thirty bushels per acre, the average being twenty to twenty-five bushels. Barley, thirty to fifty bushels. Oats, forty to sixty. Peas, fifteen to thirty-five bushels; and all these have been sowed extensively, especially barley. Indian corn is not much sown, and has not done well. Flax, where sown, has succeeded well. Root crops are generally good, with the exception of potatoes, which though a heavy crop, are generally rotting. Hay has yielded one and one-half to two and a half tons per acre, but has been very generally damaged by wet. Indeed, the complaints of more or less injury, caused by heavy rains, to various crops, are very general. It is remarkable that in many cases where Fall wheat has yielded heavily, Spring wheat has been light, and the opposite holds good quite as often. The above remarks apply chiefly to Ontario. In Quebec there is not much wheat sown, but barley and oats are generally a very good crop. Peas are backward and injured by rains, and potatoes are rotting. Buckwheat yields heavily, and root crops, where planted, are good. Hay has been a very heavy crop, and is, for the most part, saved in good order. In the more northerly parts of the Province a considerable portion of the crops are yet outstanding, and great fears are entertained of early frosts.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION

A Defence of the Judiciary Article—The Elective System—Long and Short Terms.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I regret very much to see an article in today's TIMES in opposition to the Judiciary article of the New Constitution. I feel sure that you cannot have examined the new proposed Judiciary article carefully, or you would not permit so intelligent and powerful a guide of public opinion as the TIMES to give the weight of its influence to its enemies. Will you permit me through your columns to say something in its advocacy.

And first let me reply briefly to your objections. I admit, with you, that the elective principle, as applied to Judges, is wholly and radically wrong. But you omit to state, and perhaps have neglected to notice, that the new article provides a mode of relief. Section 17 provides for the submission to electors of the State in 1873, of two questions. First, "Shall the offices of Chief Judge and Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals, and of Justice of the Supreme Court be hereafter filled by appointment?" and second, "Shall the offices of the Judges mentioned in sections 12 and 15 of article 6 (Judges of the Superior Court and Court of Common Pleas in New-York, City Court of Brooklyn, Superior Court of Buffalo, and County Courts throughout the State,) be hereafter filled by appointment?" And if either or both questions are answered by a majority of affirmative votes, the Judges indicated by the question or questions affirmatively answered, shall thereafter be appointed.

Now you and I would like to see the elective system immediately abolished. But this can only be done by a popular vote. And is there any speedier or any better way of accomplishing this than that provided by this article? If it is rejected, what is to be done? You say hold another Convention. But can you give any assurance that another Convention will be any wiser than the last? If the people can be induced to give up electing Judges, they will so vote on the submission of these questions. If not, we must keep the elective system; but if we must have it, should we not try to make it as free from objection as possible? Your objection to prolonging terms is, in my judgment, altogether unsound. The great objection to short terms is the effect upon Judges who are not of the highest order to spend their energies in "laying pipe" for a renomination and reflection. Hence it happens that the best Judges have often failed of a reflection, while those of doubtful (if not worse) reputation, have almost invariably been reflected. The present term of Judges of the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals is eight years; that of Judges of the Superior Court and Common Pleas, six. The new Constitution makes the term of all fourteen years. Now what has been the effect of the short term system? Has a change in the Judge at the end of his eight or six years been generally an improvement? The Judges of the Supreme Court, elected first under the Constitution of 1846, were, almost without exception, lawyers of high reputation for ability and integrity. In the First District were JONES, HURLBUT, EDMONDS and EDWARDS; and the names of STRONG and MCCOUN of the Second; HARRIS and PARKER of the Third; CADY, PAIGE, WILLARD and HAND of the Fourth; PRATT, GRIDLEY and W. F. ALLEN of the Fifth; MASON and SHAUDLAND of the Sixth; JOHNSON and SELDEN of the Seventh; BILL and MARVIN of the Eighth, names known and honored by the profession everywhere, are evidence that, in that year at least, the popular selection was a wise one. They were classified so that their terms expired in two, four, six and eight years respectively. Some of the best of them failed of reflection, and their successors were generally inferior to them. Why? Simply because they (these first elected) would not pervert their offices to secure a reflection—just what an unscrupulous Judge is always ready to do. What is the result? Let me state a few facts by way of illustration. Judge BOSWORTH served six years in the Superior Court, and was supplanted by MCCUNN. BOSWORTH was by everybody conceded to be an upright and able Judge. I say nothing of MCCUNN. But would not fourteen years of BOSWORTH have been at least as well for the public as six of BOSWORTH and six of MCCUNN, with a good chance of reelection for the latter? Judge BONNEY was succeeded by Judge BARNARD. The latter Judge served his eight years, and was reflected. A striking proof of the wisdom of short terms! I venture the opinion that the distinguished jurist last above named would stand a much better chance of staying permanently on the Bench under a four-year term system than a fourteen-year system. Managing primary elections and conventions is his forte. So in the Fourth District, strongly Republican, Judge ROSEBRAKE was reflected, and is serving on his second term. This fact will be appreciated by those who know this Judge.

The truth is the new Constitution, instead of being, as you say, "just twice as bad" as the present one, in this respect is twice as good. Judge CLERKE's term in your City expires this year. He is an honest man. Have you any idea that he will be reflected? Is it not morally certain, on the other hand, that he will be succeeded by some man upon whom "the Ring" are sure they can rely? But if the term were fourteen years, you could have the benefit of CLERKE's integrity, experience and learning for six years longer. With a term of fourteen years but few would want or expect a reflection. Even an inferior man would naturally seek to acquire a judicial reputation upon which he and his posterity could look with satisfaction. Under the new system there will be no vacancies, or short terms, to fill. A Judge, when elected, will be elected in all cases for a full term of fourteen years. The end of the term will be too distant and the chance of his wanting a reflection even, too small to tempt him to use his high position and power in subserviency to managing politicians, upon whose favor he now is apt to think he may depend for a reflection. Thus one great source of judicial demoralization will be substantially abolished.

Another consideration. Under the present system, if a Judge behaves badly, the hope that he may be defeated on the expiration of his term prevents men from seeking to impeach and remove him. One Judge has already been saved from impeachment by this consideration; and when his term expired he was reflected! But people will be less likely to endure fourteen years of a bad Judge. They will be more likely to strike by impeachment, when the forlorn hope of his judicial life's ending with a short term is removed.

I have thus endeavored to reply to your objections. With your permission I will endeavor, in other letters, to present to your readers a few considerations as to the advantages presented by the new Judiciary article. The present condition of our Judiciary is disgraceful and intolerable. Under it property, liberty and life are daily growing less secure. I believe that the new Judiciary article promises relief. Heaven knows we can have nothing worse than we now have. The proposed article is imperfect, I admit; but I think I can show that it is a vast improvement on the present. Let me entreat you to reconsider your opinion, hastily formed, as I think it is. At least let me, through your columns, present my views on this so important subject, unless some pen abler than mine, and on that side, presents itself, in which case I shall gladly submit to be repressed. I know that the ablest and purest lawyers in the State, of both parties, desire the adoption of this article. The Democrats will not be bound by the foolish resolution of their Convention, dictated as it was by Tammany, which sees danger ahead.

SYRT, Oct. 24, 1869.

REBEL LOSSES IN THE WAR.

Estimate of Dr. Joseph Jones, Secretary of the Southern Historical Society.

From the New-Orleans Picayune.

NEW-ORLEANS, Aug. 2, 1869.

General S. Cooper, Alexandria, Va.:

DEAR SIR: You will please excuse the liberty which I take in trespassing upon your valuable time.

I have recently been preparing for the Historical Society a paper upon the losses of the Confederate army from battle, wounds and disease during the civil war 1861-5. The following general results of my investigation are most respectfully submitted to you for examination and criticism:

Killed, Wounded and Prisoners of the Confederate Army During the War, 1861-65.

Year.	Killed.	Wounded.	Prisoners.
1861	1,816	4,064	2,772
1862	16,662	62,682	6,527
1863	22,000	81,313	71,211
1864-5	32,000	99,000	85,000
Total	72,478	194,059	165,510

If the deaths from disease be added, the sum total will represent the entire loss.

The returns of the field and general hospitals are known for 1861 and 1862.

Confederates killed in battle, 1861-2	19,337
Deaths, caused by wounds, in field hospitals	1,622
Deaths, caused by wounds, in general hospitals	5,418
Deaths, caused by disease, in field hospitals	14,597
Deaths, caused by disease, in general hospitals	16,741
Total deaths in the C. S. A., 1861-2	55,676
Total wounded in C. S. A., 1861-2	77,712
Total prisoners in C. S. A., 1861-2	21,823
Total discharged in C. S. A., 1861-2	16,049
Total wounded, prisoners and discharged in 1861-2	115,584

It is fair to assume that the total mortality of 1863-4 was fully equal to that of 1862, then the total deaths in the Confederate army, 1861-5 were at least 160,000, exclusive of the deaths in Northern prisons, which would swell the number to near 185,000; and if the deaths among the discharged for wounds and diseases, and among the sick and wounded on furlough, be added, the grand total of deaths in the Confederate army, during the entire war, did not fall far short of 300,000.

According to this calculation, the deaths from disease were about three times as numerous as those resulting from the casualties of battle.

The available Confederate force capable of active service in the field did not, during the entire war, exceed 600,000 men. Of this number, not more than 400,000 were enrolled at any one time; and this is believed to be about the number in all more than 200,000 men capable of bearing arms, at any one time, exclusive of sick, wounded and disabled.

If the preceding calculation be correct, we have the following figures, illustrating the losses of the Confederate States during the war:

Confederate forces actively engaged, 1861-5	600,000
Total deaths in Confederate States Army	300,000
Losses of Confederate States Army in prisoners, 1861-5, which may be considered as total losses, according to the policy of non-exchange by the United States	200,000
Losses of Confederate States Army by discharging, disability and desertion	100,000

If this calculation, which is given only as an approximation, be correct, one-third of all the men actively engaged in the Confederate army were either killed outright upon the field or died of disease and wounds; another third of the entire number were captured and held for an indefinite period in Northern prisons; and of the remaining 400,000, at least one-half were lost to the service by discharge and desertion.

At the close of the war the available force of the Confederate States numbered scarcely 100,000 effective men.

The resolution, unsurpassed bravery and skill with which the Confederate leaders conducted this contest is shown by the fact that out of 600,000 men in the field, about 300,000 were lost to the service.

At the close of the war the 100,000 Confederates were opposed to one million (1,000,000) Federal troops.

Your approval or disapproval of this calculation is most respectfully solicited.

The distinguished ability with which you discharged the responsible and arduous duties of Adjutant-General of the Confederate Army qualifies you, above every other officer of the late Confederate States, to decide how far such calculations may approach to accuracy.

With great respect and the highest esteem, I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

JOSEPH JONES, M. D.,
Secretary and Treasurer Southern Historical Society, Professor Chemistry Medical Department University of Louisiana.

GENERAL COOPER'S REPLY.

NEAR ALEXANDRIA, VA., Aug. 29, 1869.

Dr. Joseph Jones, Secretary and Treasurer of the Southern Historical Society, New-Orleans, La.:

DEAR SIR: I have been delayed in receiving your kind and interesting letter of the 2d instant, and beg you will accept my best thanks for the same.

I have closely examined your several statements in respect to the Confederate military forces during the late war, as well as the casualties mentioned therein, and I have come to the conclusion, from my general recollection, which those statements have served to enlighten, that they must be regarded as nearly critically correct. Most of the returns from which you must probably have derived your information, must have passed through the files of my office while in the Confederacy, and if reference could be made to all the records of that office they would, I have no doubt, enable you to give nearly a complete history of the strength and operations of our armies in detail. The files of that office which could not be saved this information was carefully boxed up, and taken on our retreat from Richmond to Charlotte, North Carolina, where they were unfortunately finally captured, and, as I learn, are now in Washington, where they are properly arranged in a separate building, with those pertaining to the Confederacy. I presume that by proper management reference might be had to them. Indeed, I had at one time contemplated to make an effort to renew my acquaintance with the records by a personal application to the authorities in Washington, but I fear it may always remain a dream.

It would afford me much pleasure to furnish you with the information in the tabular form you have suggested, but it would be quite impossible for me to do this without reference to those records. I can only state from general recollection that during the two last years of the war the monthly returns of our armies received at my office exhibited the present active force in the field nearly one-half less than the returns themselves actually called for, on account of absentees by sickness, extra duty, furloughs, desertions, and other casualties incident to a campaign life. These returns were kept with great secrecy, in order to prevent the enemy from becoming acquainted with our weakness. Another disparity between the two opposing forces, if not alike in the number of troops, as you have exhibited in your tables, at least of sufficient importance to satisfy every unprejudiced mind that we were constantly laboring, throughout the contest, under every possible disadvantage.

I perceive by the printed prospectus of the "Southern Historical Society," which you were so kind as to send me, that time must be given in collecting the necessary facts which are to be the basis of this important work, before it shall be prepared and given to the public. To this end it will be my endeavor to contribute, from time to time, such facts as I may be enabled to collect, and as may be deemed of consequence by the Society. With great respect, I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

S. COOPER.

Violence and Starvation in Paterson.

A colored girl, known as MARTHA, has recently made a statement before the Grand Jury of Passaic County, charging Mr. CHARLES MCNEIL, a man of considerable wealth—who took her from the Colored Orphan Asylum in this City—with revolting inhumanity toward her. In the early part of the month of July, according to the girl's statement, Mrs. MCNEIL charged her with having stolen a pocketbook, containing money, from Mr. MCNEIL's room. The girl denied the charge, and then, as she alleges, she was tied up by the thumbs to a beam in the barn, and left in that position for the greater part of one night. She states that she was whipped by Mr. MCNEIL at intervals, and that she was subsequently taken down and confined in a room upon an insufficient allowance of food. She finally escaped, according to her story, at a great risk. The girl is about 11 years of age; and her story, which is told with an appearance of truthfulness, excites a great deal of sympathy and indignation.

Judge of the Supreme Court—Meeting of the Friends of Mr. Marvin.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Joseph J. Marvin Democratic Association of the Eighteenth Ward was held at Jefferson Hall Saturday night. The gathering of the people showed earnestness and unanimity in support of their favorite candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court. ALGERNON S. SULLIVAN, FRANCIS V. S. OLIVER, Esqs., and other gentlemen of ability lent the addition of their eloquent voices to the enthusiasm of the meeting, and their stirring and splendid addresses made a deep impression on the people. The Club, under whose auspices the meeting was held, was officered by Mr. MORRISON, President, and JAMES KANE, Secretary, and resolutions recommending to Tammany Hall the nomination of Mr. MARVIN for Justice of the Supreme Court were unanimously adopted, and their reading loudly and enthusiastically cheered.

NEW FOUNDLING HOME

Its Origin—Arrangements for the Care of Infants.

At last New-York is about to be blessed with a "Home" for the poor little foundlings, and to the Sisters of Charity does the honor belong of taking the initatory steps in this wise and humane movement. These good ladies have frequently been called up by the tinkle of the house bell, at the dark hours of the night, to find the dying form of the foundling lying at their door, left there by a mother who deemed the little cave safe while in the Sisters' charge. These good nuns, one of whose houses is at No. 14 Barclay-street, next St. Peter's Church, say that so accustomed have they become to that warning tinkle that they at once lift their window up hearing it to see if the expected little "bundle" was waiting at the door. The ladies had no place where to keep those little ones, and were reluctantly obliged to send them to the Almshouse. These "nobody's children" were consequently left in the schoolroom, and consequently inside the tattlings on the church steps. The Sisters desired to have some place to receive and care for them, and to provide a home for them. In order, therefore, to ascertain how such institutions worked elsewhere, the Sister Superior of St. Peter's School visited Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and New-Orleans, and returned fully impressed with the importance of the good work she had been accomplished in the Homes established in the cities visited.

The Sisters of Charity resolved that such another institution should be established in the great Metropolis, not only, as these ladies say, for the proper care and training of the little ones, but also as the means of saving deluded women from the crime of infanticide. Some private individuals having heard of the undertaking, sent donations to the Sisters head, and the latter, in order that the good work should commence at once, rented a house for temporary use. This place is situated in Twelfth-street, near Fifth-avenue, and the Sisters have themselves taken the responsibility of the rent, hoping that the people of New-York, seeing they are in earnest, will help them to carry out successfully this laudable desire. The house will not be ready to receive the little outcasts until the latter part of October, but the nuns will take possession of it this week so as to prepare it for its future use. The building, however, is in very bad condition and has no furniture, and the Sisters will not be able to erect one, as the cost ($600) is beyond reach of their means. They hope, however, to keep their charges from the cold of approaching Winter by means of the clothing and fuel which they expect to receive from the charitable. The arrangements for carrying out the undertaking are admirable. No sectarianism will be tolerated; every child that is presented will be cared for, and no questions asked the person having it at the Home. Lest any should be unwilling or ashamed to meet the Sisters, a crib will be placed in a retired place, where the poor mother can place with safety her offspring without fear of being watched by curious or inquisitive eyes. The child will be baptized, and reared at the Home until it reaches the age of five years, when it will be placed at school, educated and taught a trade, and then, when old enough, provided with a situation to earn an honest living, and be a good, useful citizen.

The house on Twelfth-street is but taken for the present, as the Sisters hope that our citizens, seeing the good work is done by such an institution, will give the means to erect a suitable building in the suburbs, and their friends are sanguine that when shown the great benefits to be derived from the institution by the City at large, our City Council will see that it will be nothing more than an act of policy for a grant of aid for an institution which has for its objects the nurturing of the young, the prevention of crime and the making of good citizens out of beings who would otherwise, when grown old, become charges on some one or other of our public institutions.

The building, although not yet occupied, date over one hundred infants. The most careful and fond nurses will be engaged, and there will be constantly under the close supervisory of the Sisters of Charity. This institution will be one where there will be all outlay, as the little inmates are not to be sold or reared as bondsmen. The Sisters, therefore, look to the citizens of New-York to support them in an undertaking which is one that should command the sympathy of all.

Recapture of an Escaped Convict.

RICHARD BURNS, who was charged with being concerned in the murder of Mr. CRAPP, one of the prison keepers at Sing Sing, disappeared on Thursday of last week and eluded all efforts to discover his whereabouts until Saturday morning, when he was found secreted in an obscure corner of the bucket shop. One of the watchmen on Thursday night heard a noise in the bucket shop as though it arose from some persons sparring a sight-seeing and on examining being made at the place indicated, the prisoner was found, and where he is supposed to have been regularly fed by one at least of his fellow convicts during his eight or nine days' concealment in close quarters.

Navy Yard Intelligence.

The Severn, which the TIMES announced a day or two since as having gone on her trial trip, has returned to the Brooklyn Navy Yard. It appears that the French propeller worked unsatisfactorily, and that hence she will be put on the drydock for the purpose of having her old propeller restored to its place, as it is said to work much better than the new one.

The Gwydre, a first-class frigate, is now being fitted up for service. There is a large body of workmen on board, and the business is being prosecuted rapidly. She will have a new forecastle, and other modern improvements.

Probable Murder in Astoria.

On Thursday afternoon GEO. L. CHAMBERS, of Astoria, L. I., shot a boy named JOHN MYERS with a rifle. The ball penetrated the thigh, and inflicted such a ghastly wound as to render amputation necessary. At last accounts he was pronounced in a dying condition by his physician. CHAMBERS was arrested and put under $5,000 bonds to appear. The people are highly indignant at his release, and demand his arrest and incarceration.

The New Brooklyn Market.

The market which has been for some time past in process of erection in Adams-street, Brooklyn, will be completed and open for business by the 20th of this month. The market will have a frontage on Adams-street, Fulton-street and Myrtle-avenue, and will contain 100 stands. Arrangements are also to be made for dealers to get produce of farmers at the doors of the market.

Another Horrible Accident.

On Saturday evening the wife of JAMES NEWBURY, of Winfield, Queens County, was burned to death by the accidental explosion of a kerosene oil lamp.

The Wall-Street Gamblers Aided by the New-York Judiciary.

A few plain-spoken words may not be inappropriate to last week's panic in Wall-street. The present flurry is, happily, localized. We hope we are near the end of the troubles growing out of it. But this may not be the case, if the same bad men, or any two or three of them, are permitted to resume their places in the midst of the bankers and brokers of the City, as entitled to either credit or forbearance. Another such trial upon confidence and commercial propriety might result in widespread embarrassment to the whole country. It certainly should not be permitted, and yet there is reason to fear that it will be. The Judiciary of the City has been used even more extensively than before—and that was bad enough—to bring scandal upon the whole elective system—to protect these men in what are styled, by courtesy, "settlements," but which really amount to nothing more than the plunder of the brokers who were victimized by the wicked and desperate attempt to "corner" the gold market. The attempt having ended in explosion, and two of the parties having fled the Street, the remaining two resorted, with the aid of their fugitive confederate, intrenched in his own Opera House, guarded by a Sheriff's posse, and in telegraphic communication with Broad-street, to a shower of their favorite injunctions against everything and everybody in the Stock and Gold Exchange who had anything to do with them, directly or indirectly, and some others with whom they had no transactions, and against banks and other money lenders who had lent, not to themselves alone, but to other parties, on Cleveland and Pittsburg stock.

It is now notoriously understood, if not boastingly avowed, by the "plaintiffs" themselves, that these extraordinary processes were resorted to to prevent the return or collection, in due course, and to delay "settlements" on any other terms than those of their own dictation, the millions of dollars which had been advanced to them by way of gold margins between 135 and 160 per cent. by the brokers of the street, and part of which had been wrung out of them on the eve of the explosion, under threats of foreclosing the next day on harder terms. Nor were these judicial fulminations confined to the direct creditors of the clique. They were served extensively upon their own brokers and upon the brokers of their brokers, to enjoin any honorable settlements that they might attempt to make, irrespective of their principals. And we have now published to the world as "defendants" to this proceeding some half dozen or more of the most upright young men in the street, and several houses of large responsibility.

Without expressing any particular sympathy for this class of the Gould-Smith victims or the Gould-Fisk creditors, we hold the outrage to be a common scandal to the business public, and to the New-York Judiciary as well, that the power of injunction should be thus abused. All the brokers knew with whom they were dealing. They knew them through the fraudulent issue of ten or twelve millions of Erie stock in the Spring of 1868, for which they fled the State, and continued for weeks across the river in New-Jersey, until the Legislature at Albany could be persuaded to condone the act. They knew them in the subsequent fraud of twenty-three millions of stock, of the same helpless corporation, for which there was no condonement beyond an order from Judge BARNARD permitting JAY GOULD, as quasi receiver of the road, to buy back this stock, which he and FISK had taken to account at forty cents on the dollar, at any price under par, for account of the Company! He did thus withdraw three millions, reducing the common capital of the road from $60,000,000 to $57,000,000. But subsequently, as these brokers and the whole Stock Exchange were recently advised, added thirteen millions, as a new fraud upon the Erie corporation, for which there is not even a sign of justification or condonement. As all these outrages had been quietly submitted to by the whole Street—with the single exception of Mr. AUGUST BELMONT, who was fairly driven out of the Courts by the audacity and annoyances of these men, and the impunity with which they could do anything with the Courts; and after the recent official recognition by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and the Stock Exchange of seventy millions of Erie common capital, as against twenty-two millions when GOULD and FISK took the road two years ago, it is scarcely to be wondered at that their next flight of audacity should be to "burst the Street" by "cornering" gold. If failing to do so, but blowing themselves up and FISK, Jr., out of the Street, they should resort to their favorite Courts to restrain all restitution of moneys advanced to them and the enforcement of all contracts made with them, they at least preserve the consistency of their antecedents.

But all this is aside from last week's action by the Judges. In the case of the Cleveland and Pittsburg stock the wrong is even greater, if it were possible to be so, than restraining the gold brokers and the Stock Exchange from pursuing their rights under the law of the land, as well as under their own rules. In this instance GOULD and SMITH could not take the necessary oath as plaintiffs to enjoin the collection of loans upon Cleveland and Pittsburg which they had made themselves and caused their brokers to make; they were therefore made defendants in common with their brokers and the Union Bank and other money lenders, on the oath of FISK, Jr., from his intrenched camp in Twenty-third-street, and it is curious to tell how or wherefore. FISK swears that he is a director of the Erie Railway, one of the few oaths of the many which he utters which, unfortunately, cannot be questioned. And that the Erie Company, and not GOULD and FISK or GOULD and SMITH own the Pittsburg stock; that GOULD and SMITH have borrowed, and the other defendants lent, upon this stock, and that it must not be sold to reimburse the loans, because the Pittsburg Road is a valuable auxiliary to the Erie Road, although not within a hundred and forty miles of either end of it! The Judge granted the injunction, and Pittsburg is once more "safe."

If we should say that this scandalous affidavit has no other foundation than that GOULD, FISK and LANE bought the controlling interest in Pittsburg, or supposed they had done so, after failing to vote out the old directors last Winter, and that the Erie ownership of the stock was never heard of until this injunction, it would only be to pay a tribute of respect to the State Courts of Ohio, which refused to surrender this road into the hands of these bad men, even though they had bought half the capital, until, for the protection of the other stockholders and the bondholders, the administration of the Company had been replaced in the hands of Mr. MCCULLOCH and a majority of the Board, acting at all times with him. This action contrasts notably with the facilities to railway wrecking afforded by our own Judiciary.

The Spanish Gunboats.

The efforts which are being made to assist the independence party in Cuba on the one hand, and to cripple them on the other, are fast producing complications of unusual public interest. On each side there are arrayed many friends, and it certainly is not because money is scarce, or activity is wanting, that formidable expeditions have not been fitted out from our coasts. The partisans of both sides have been untiring in their endeavors to further their plans from so convenient a point as the United States. Now, however, the plot thickens every day.

It is said that a privateer, which sailed from Halifax, is now off our coast, waiting for an opportunity of striking a blow at Spanish commerce. The vessel in question, the Hornet, was purchased for "the Republic of Cuba" at sea, and at sea also was armed and equipped. So runs the story. By various devices another vessel, called the Alabama, is said to have escaped from this port a week ago, with arms and men for the insurgents. It is impossible either to verify or disprove these statements, but we must admit that in the case of the Hornet they are so circumstantial in their character as to compel us to accept them.

While these movements are reported on behalf of the Cubans, we have witnessed the preparation of a strong fleet of gunboats for the Spanish Government. What may be the intended destination of these boats we do not know; the Peruvian Minister is of opinion that they are to be used against Peru. Certain it is that they were ordered by agents of the Spanish Government, and that it is generally surmised they have been built not for ornament, but for use. The representatives of Spain in this country are anxious to have the flotilla depart as quickly as possible, and they maintain that the United States Government has no power to stop it. We cannot argue this point, because it is too clear to admit of doubt, that if reasonable cause can be shown by the Peruvian Minister, these vessels can be detained. The course which the Administration has hitherto pursued is a guarantee that no violation of international law will be permitted. The case of the gunboats is, no doubt, one of great difficulty to decide. We have not recognized the insurgents in Cuba as belligerents, and Spain can, if she is so minded, build vessels here for the preservation of peace in her own territories. If it be proved that the gunboats are designed for Cuba, we should have no right to stop them. But they are detained on complaint of the Peruvian Minister. A Power with which we are at peace represents that a hostile fleet is being fitted out in our ports against her. What, then, is to be done?

We believe we shall be found correct in predicting that the Government will not allow these Spanish gunboats to leave the wharves and docks where they now lie until some security is given with reference to their destination. The rumor that the departure of the vessels will be connived at is without any foundation. A vigilant watch is being kept over them, and we anticipate that it will be maintained, and the gunboats kept where they are, unless the Spanish authorities can make out an indisputable case for their release. Spain can find no cause of offence in this. We are bound to pay heed to the representations which have been made on behalf of Peru. The position of our Government is doubtless not one which it would voluntarily have assumed, but, having a duty to fulfill, it will perform it without hesitation. If the Hornet is waiting for any of the Spanish gunboats, she is likely to be disappointed.

Jerome Park—The Fall Meeting.

A thrill of pleasure will animate the breasts of many, this morning, at the news that they have entered on the first race week of the season, and that on Wednesday Jerome Park will throw open its gates to inaugurate a series of sports which bids fair to eclipse any that have yet been seen even on its own beautiful grounds. There are to be six races on the occasion, Mr. BELMONT's Finesse and Attraction, Mr. JEROME's Rapture, Messrs. HUNTER & TRAVERS' Intrigue, and other famous and promising horses being among the entries. The fifth race is a handicap sweepstakes for all ages, to be ridden by gentlemen riders; and the concluding event of the day is a selling race of a mile and a furlong, the entries for which remain open until to-morrow. The first "regular" day is Saturday, Oct 9, and the others are Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, the 12th, 14th, and 16th, respectively. The entries for these occasions are such, in the opinion of turfmen, as to warrant brilliant anticipations, and to justify the augury of a success for the present Fall Meeting, exceeding any hitherto attained.

It is satisfactory to record that the prospect is so good, for, just as well-regulated and respectably-patronized theatres correct the abuses of the stage, so races conducted as they are at Jerome Park diminish the evils of the turf. Trials of speed between horses in some form or another, experience shows, the people will have; and, this being so, there can be no better practicable shape than one where vicious and degrading surroundings are as far as possible excluded, or rigorously kept out of sight—where, therefore, pure women and decent men can repair without being shocked or lowered in their own esteem; where, in a word, the sports of the turf are attended by none save healthful and cheering influences. This has been achieved at the former meetings at Jerome Park, and the same features will characterize future meetings.

It is generally admitted that our people need more holidays. As a rule they work much too hard, and their amusements, if numerous, are not of a sufficiently diversified character. There are advantages, too, in bringing together, face to face, now and then, different classes and callings for what is safe to be a genuine merry-making—a scene where whatever is natural and buoyant in human beings is almost sure to be brought to the surface; where friendships are made and renewed, and where carking care, and gold and stocks, and buying and selling and drudgery, are, at least for a few hours, tossed to the winds.

Those who have never seen Jerome Park on one of its red-letter days, have little idea of its bright aspect at such times. Its graceful slopes, broken at the centre by the abrupt and picturesque rise which is crowned by the Clubhouse, its throngs of lovely women, its masses of kaleidescopic color, its music, and above all, its periodic extraordinary hush of expectancy, universal throughout the vast throng, and followed at critical moments by the tremendous roar of enthusiasm, doubt, anxiety, exultation, as the race approaches an exciting finish—there is nothing like all this to be heard or seen elsewhere in the country. Of all sights and sounds, those of intense human excitement are most profoundly interesting, and a great race is apt to stir men's souls as few other events can. To many observers the people themselves on such an occasion are more interesting than the spectacle that attracts them. Excitement in an individual is a powerful stimulant to the curiosity with which he is regarded, and, in a crowd, the rule acts with compound force.

There are good reasons for making a decided success for the approaching Fall meeting at Jerome Park a desirable thing. Other considerations are not wanting that deserve to be touched upon. It has taken an immense deal of private money and private enterprise to establish for the public so splendid a playground, so charming a resort for fashionable and popular reunion. The people of New-York will show only a fitting and gracious appreciation of what has been wrought in their behalf, by doing their part to make the meetings at Jerome Park bright and memorable holidays, and every well-wisher of the City and its people must certainly desire that the popular expectations shall be fully realized.

The case of Passed Assistant Surgeon GREEN seems to be discussed on all hands, and very unjustly, as an incident of the chronic dispute between staff and line in the navy. The Court-martial found that Surgeon GREEN had been guilty of the offence of disobeying a lawful order of his superior officer. The facts showed that Surgeon GREEN was ordered by Lieutenant-Commander SELFRIDGE, the commanding officer of the Nipsic, to which vessel GREEN was attached, to take the name of one SIMMONS, an ordinary seaman, off the sick list. This order GREEN refused to obey, from conscientious scruples, and was, of course, put under arrest. The Court sentenced GREEN to be suspended from rank on furlough pay for two years, and to be publicly reprimanded by the Secretary. This sentence the latter officer pronounced to be "not unsuited to the offence;" however, regarding the disobedience complained of as "the result of mistake of judgment in regard to professional ranks," he remitted the rank suspension, and reprimanded only. On this statement of facts some of our contemporaries base a censure of the Secretary and the Court-martial. It appears to us that both the Court and the Secretary were perfectly justified, and that their decisions are eminently just. The evidence shows that the ship's crew was small, and that "her working had been previously crippled by reason of the number of men on the sick list, and the seaman referred to was, by the admission of the accused, able to do light duty." Thus it is clear that the order of Lieutenant-Commander SELFRIDGE was not a mere reckless and arbitrary whim founded on folly, but the just exercise of an authority which any officer commanding a ship must possess. Mr. GREEN's mistake was evidently in supposing that within his own domain he was absolute, and that there the commanding officer himself must yield. The truth is that the right to excuse a seaman from duty was one whose final decision rests on the ship's commander. The Surgeon may and should report his opinion; in ordinary cases the authority to excuse is expressly or constructively given to him also. But, after all, the final authority on this subject rests with the commander, who ought to and must assume the responsibility. This was the ground taken by the Court, and to us it seems impregnable.

Suits Against National Banks.

Our readers may recollect the theft, which occurred a year or two ago, of a box containing securities which had been placed for safe keeping in a vault in the Marine National Bank in this City. It was a theft which at the time made a good deal of talk, though it has since been thrown entirely into significance by others of a similar kind. The manner in which this robbery was effected was, so far as we recollect, never discovered. But some parties interested in the contents of the box thought that the bank had not taken proper care in the matter, and commenced a suit to recover the value of the stolen property. Whether for convenience sake, or because they thought their chances of success would be greater if the suit was brought where the bank was a stranger, they brought their action in Massachusetts, commencing it by attaching funds which the Marine National Bank had there. The suit was naturally looked upon with a good deal of interest, as well by men concerned in banks as by men whose boxes were left in bank vaults; for its determination was likely to fix with some degree of certainty the amount of care which the banks were bound to take of such deposits—a care for which they were not paid, and which had not been supposed to involve any responsibility.

When the case was tried in Boston the presiding Judge held that the plaintiffs had not shown any facts which brought the bank within any rule of liability for such deposits, and from that ruling the case went up by appeal. The Appellate Court has recently rendered its decision, which, though it throws no light whatever upon the question of the liability of a bank for such a loss, has laid down a rule upon another question which is of even more interest and importance to the banks and the community. It holds, as we are informed, that the Court in Massachusetts had no jurisdiction of the action at all, because under the National Banking act such banks can only be sued where they are established. The provision in the Banking act is the fifty-seventh section, and is as follows:

"Suits, actions and proceedings against any association under this act, may be had in any Circuit, District or Territorial Court of the United States, held within the district in which such association may be established; or in any State, county or municipal Court in the county or city in which said association is located, having jurisdiction in similar cases."

The ruling of the Court would seem to be that the mention of certain Courts in which these banks can be sued is the exclusion of all others.

If this is settled upon as the true construction of the statute, we suspect that it will not be long before Congress will be called upon to change the law. To give National Banks an exemption from all suits except in the county or city or district where they are located, is to give them an advantage which no other bank and no citizen has, and we know of nothing in the history of banks, or the condition of the National Banks, which warrants the giving to them of such an especial protection.

The Albany Evening Journal urges upon Mr. GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS the reconsideration of his decision not to accept the Republican nomination for Secretary of State. "A sentiment most imperative," it is said, demands his acceptance; and the interests of the State are presented as superior to personal feeling. We shall, indeed, be glad if Mr. CURTIS find it possible to perform a party service for which his high character and brilliant abilities specially qualify him; but his continued declination will not prove him unmindful of the patriotic reasons which our Albany contemporary ingenuously upon his attention. Meanwhile the Binghamton Republican states the strong claims of General ROBINSON—who has been nominated for State Engineer—to the position assigned to Mr. CURTIS, while the Syracuse Journal speaks in behalf of Hon. JAMES O. PUTNAM, of Erie. We shall soon hear further from the State Committee.

To-day the Tennessee Legislature convenes, and within ten days, probably, it will ballot for United States Senator. It is upon the whole, one of the ablest legislative bodies that has ever convened in the State, each party having, in the last canvass, put its "best foot foremost," and nominated strong men. The struggle for the Senatorship will be desperate; but a Nashville correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial is confident that ANDREW JOHNSON will be chosen. The same writer predicts that the Fifteenth Amendment will be rejected; that "the late partisan legislation will be generally repealed;" that the State bonds will not be repudiated, though, perhaps, saved as by fire; and that a Constitutional Convention will soon be called to effect universal enfranchisement of all classes of men, black and white. These speculations at present seem probable enough; in a very few days, however, the tone of the Legislature will be definitely known.

The Fall trade is upon us with a brisk beginning and bright prospects. This is a cheery fact, and more than an offset, perhaps, for the anxiety and gloom which the Wall-street storm has brought to monetary circles. Save the dry-goods trade, which is affected through the price of cotton, by the fluctuations of gold, no branch of business seems to have felt the financial flurry. The Southern trade is reported as "trebled" over 1868; and the particulars we present elsewhere of the demand in various branches, show that both the South and West are already taking a great many goods from our merchants. It is noteworthy also that a better class of goods, in general, is called for at the South. This happy revival of trade will trouble nobody but the chronic croakers, who, however, will very likely come out as optimists, and say "I told you so."

Mr. PENDLETON, we understand. And the whole tribe of outspoken repudiators are not likely to be misunderstood. But there are Democrats who are so far ashamed of repudiation as to shrink from its open advocacy, yet whose partisan affiliations compel them to be its supporters. Politicians of this sort take shelter under generalities about the terms of the law. They would not have the country deem them disciples of Mr. PENDLETON, and they hope to escape identification by declaring that they are favorable to the payment of the bonds "in strict accordance with the law." There they would have the matter drop. But the phrase is too evasive to be accepted. It is, in fact, an attempt to escape odium and defeat by a resort to false pretences. For if the purpose were to pay the bonds in gold, the Democratic tricksters would say so in language as plain as that which is employed in the Republican platform. When, therefore, they speak of "the terms of the contract," they mean the contract as interpreted by themselves—which is an interpretation hostile to payment in coin. The thin disguise does not conceal the enormity of repudiation.

The operations of the Wall-street banditti would be bad enough in their effect upon the financial credit of New-York abroad; but they are greatly aggravated by the manifest readiness of the local Judiciary to plaw into the hands of men for whom Sing Sing is the proper place of refuge. What confidence can foreign capitalists, or even the capitalists of other States, feel in enterprises and securities which are subject to raids like that just witnessed, and for which the Courts afford no redress? What faith can any one repose in investments which may controlled by Judges and legions of Deputy Sheriffs doing the work of unprincipled and desperate men? The credit of the City and of the State suffers from events which, under the present condition of things, may any day be repeated. Capital will naturally flow to States in which the law is a power exerted to uphold right and justice.

The German element of the Tammany cohorts is yet restless and unsatisfied. We hear that it is strenuously insisting upon the nomination of a German as Police Justice in a district where the "Ring" has made a different choice. Perhaps the Sachems may succeed in satisfying all classes without impairing their organization; but we note all these indications of boding trouble in their ranks as extremely gratifying to the community.

Talking of the water-supply of our great cities, are they to be always depending on the out-of-the-way rural rivers? Great cities, as a general rule, have little foresight; and the periodical embarrassments and alarms of Philadelphia, New-York and other places show that a greatly increased population in town and country will make that supply a very difficult thing. It is very probable that, in time, the overgrown cities must take their water from the rivers at their doors—those that have such rivers—by erecting works to draw up, filter and purify the element, and so furnish it inexhaustibly. This would be a cheap and simple system compared with the present expensive machinery and means. Our present contrivances to meet the needs of fire and water are very ancient and clumsy, and the great task of chemistry must be to furnish both those elements in an easier, simpler and cheaper manner.

The basin in which the so-called fountain of Washington Parade Ground sputtered its brief Summer day, is now choked with dead leaves and other refuse, making the little water left in it slimy and pestilential. The thing is not only offensive to the eye, but positively hurtful to the public health, and the pleasant neighborhood which it fouls and disgraces demands its immediate removal. There is a tradition that somebody finds emolument as Keeper of Washington Parade Ground; if that officer is not bound by official custom to do nothing for his money, we ask him to extirpate that basin and its accompanying fountain.

The general Railroad Convention, to be held at Oswego on Wednesday, will, according to present appearances, result in some important measures with regard to transportation, especially as relates to lines in the northern part of the United States and the southern part of Canada. Railroad men, steamship men, members of Boards of Trade, and merchants interested in the transportation of grain and other produce, will study the existing lines by rail, river and canal, and see what improvements can be made for the common benefit. We shall be disappointed if something practical does not come of this meeting.

The Jewish temple Emanuel, on Fifth-avenue, shows how far the Hebrews have adopted the modes and ideas of the age and the Gentile world in general. It exhibits in rare combination the peculiarities of the Oriental and Western orders of architecture, putting them together gorgeously, and investing them with the ornament of minarets, airy galleries, stained glass windows, frescos, and there is an organ to imitate the melodious thunder of the Gregorian or Ambrosian chants. The men and women will sit together, an arrangement never allowed under the old régime, and the men will be uncovered. Thus do the oldest and most cherished rites of the world give way in time before the silent influence of new ideas and social habits, working themselves out according to the suggestions of common sense, which is, after all, a greater divinity than many people suppose.

The San Francisco Times urges the formation of a National Historical Association, which shall not only seek to preserve complete and trustworthy accounts of events which affect the nation as a whole, but which shall extend its operation to the collection of materials for the history of each separate State. The suggestion is worthy of consideration; for, as the Times well says, although the newspaper aims to present a complete record of the events of the day, it must necessarily fall short of the attainment of that object. The public demands that the Press shall give the earliest possible account of passing events, and it is not derogatory to the claims of the Press for reliability and completeness to admit that its reports only come as near the truth as the exigencies of its position render possible. When the historian, removed from the excitements and passion of the present day, attempts to prepare a faithful history of the war, he will find himself surrounded by apparently insuperable difficulties, unless other facilities are afforded him than can be found in the Northern and Southern Press and the partisan "histories of the war." The Southern Historical Society, lately organized in New-Orleans, and having branches in all the States lately in rebellion, must necessarily be influenced to a certain extent by sectional feelings in the preparation of its records of the war, yet, viewed in this light, its object is a worthy one, and the Society is deserving of encouragement.

The upholders of ancient customs always make a hard fight against the order of change, which is the order of the world. The sectarians still fight for their sects, refusing the broader and more humanizing ways of social progress. Our Common School system does not please them; and poor Mr. JERVIS, employed by the Board of Education, finds it a rather difficult task to satisfy them from that windfall of the Tax Levy. It is much the same in Ireland, where Cardinal CULLEN fights against the national system of education, and insists on making still higher the old class-barriers of that unlucky community. All this, both here and there, is natural enough, and endurable enough, too, since it is a philosophy which furnishes its own antidote. Any sort of education will put an end to it. It is only an ignorant generation that sustains the action of sectarianism—a thing that never stands the test of intelligence. Just now it makes a strong effort, under a few Governments, but it swims against the stream. When our people are educated up to a certain point, by whatever system, they will care very little for those sectarian considerations, but send their children to our common schools, and be proud of them.

During the past few years Minnesota has claimed, and has brought trustworthy statistics to substantiate the claim, that her acres have produced a higher average yield of marketable wheat than any other State in the Union. She finds now a rival to this claim in Montana. The farmers in the fertile valleys of that new Territory contend that the yield of wheat there this season has exceeded proportionately any yield ever afforded by Minnesota. They say that that State, in the most favored season, has never produced more than twenty-one and a half bushels per acre, and that the entire wheat crop of Montana the present year will average not less than thirty-three bushels per acre. A few years ago that section was included in the Great American Desert. If the present claim of her farmers be well-founded, this portion of the "Desert" has proved to be the most productive region in America.

Governor PILE's address to the people of New-Mexico shows that this Territory is in a ruinous condition. With all its splendid attractions of "climate unsurpassed and unsurpassable, abundant mineral resources, and grazing qualities superior to all other portions of the Union," yet New-Mexico has had "no increase of population or wealth for ten years." Nor this all. "At this hour," says the Governor, "your Territorial Treasury is bankrupt, the administration of civil government imperfect, no attempt is made toward the general education of your children, bands of lawless savages roam over your soil, plundering your citizens, and every branch of industry and business is languishing and stagnant. Beyond doubt there is a crisis in the affairs of the Territory." With everything thus going to the bad, Governor PILE fears that "public officers paid in worthless scrip, in increasing numbers, will resort to peculation;" that juries will be mere tools of corruption, and the Courts "worse than a farce." As to possible remedies, the Governor has "no distinct programme," but recommends, or, as it seems, seeks to coax, "a small tax of three-fourths of one per cent." on the property of the Territory, in order to protect life and property; and in addition, he thinks mounted posses might be organized to punish the marauding Indians. From the description he gives of his people, we should judge that the latter recommendation would be hailed with applause, and the former with decided disfavor. It is strange that while all the northerly Territories have grown so much, New-Mexico has taken no forward step for ten years.

The Southern Commercial Convention, to be held in Louisville next week, promises to be one of the largest and most successful assemblages of the kind ever held in this country. All the great centres of trade will be fully represented, and delegations have been appointed by the Governors of all the leading States in the Union. The published list of names shows that the delegates include a large number of men noted for their liberality, their great experience and their widely-extended influence in commercial affairs. The officers of many of the Southern railroads, appreciating the importance of the gathering as affecting their own interests, announce their intention to pass free both ways members of the Convention; and several Northern roads have signified their willingness to return free, on certificate of the President of the Convention, the members who pass over their lines. Although the Convention is called "Southern," the large number of delegates from the North and the Northwest ought to destroy any possibility of its being sectional in its character. Governor MERRILL, of Iowa, in a letter to the delegates from his State, says that it is to meet in one of the central cities of the Union in order that it may be convenient for the delegates from all the States, and he adds that while it is especially assembled to consider subjects having reference to the resuscitation of the wealth-producing interests of the southern part of the Republic, so greatly prostrated during the war, it is avowedly convoked in the spirit of conciliation and unity, and of honest devotion to the public good.

Judge Jerry Black's Suit Against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

From the New-Albany (Ind.) Commercial, Sept. 29.

The celebrated bill presented to the Nashville Railroad Company by Drs. D. W. YANDELL and HAYNES, of Louisville, for curing JERRY BLACK's arm, has not been paid. The Company have notified the doctors that they decline to pay, and, accordingly, have returned the bill. For a proper understanding of this matter it should be stated that the bill was made out against Judge BLACK, but, at the suggestion of the President of the road, it was laid before the directors, who, upon consideration, have wisely considered not to establish a precedent which would inevitably have involved them in difficulties hereafter. The result, however, the Express says, is that Judge BLACK will bring a suit for damages for the injuries he sustained; but this he would have done anyhow.

We have reasons to believe the damages claimed will not be $25,000, as heretofore stated, but will be at $50,000 to $100,000. The Company claim that the Judge expected his arm, and that they are not responsible for the accident, and this position they have taken after a thorough investigation of the facts, and upon the advice of eminent counsel. But there are always two sides to a question, and the Judge, no doubt, will seek to prove a different state of the case.

THE OCTOBER ELECTIONS.

Important State Elections in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Iowa—The Candidates to be Voted For.

The interest in the political contests of the year outside of New-York culminate during the present month. The important States of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Iowa will choose their State officers and most, if not all, the members of their several Legislatures. In Ohio and Pennsylvania the campaign has been actively prosecuted, and a large number of popular public speakers have addressed large and interested audiences upon the prominent topics of the day. In Pennsylvania, the Republicans have had upon the stump Governor John W. Geary, Hons. Columbus Delano, John Scott, Henry Wilson, John M. Thayer, General W. Schofield, William D. Kelley, John Allison, William Williams, G. A. Grow, John Covode, James Pollock, John W. Forney, Washington Townsend and several others. In Ohio, the principles of the Republican Party have been advocated by United States Senators O. P. Morton and John Sherman; Hons. John A. Bingham, Benjamin Eggleston, R. M. Corwine, Samuel Galloway, Job E. Stephenson and William Lawrence; Generals John A. Garfield, I. R. Sherwood, George A. Sheridan, P. E. Kennedy, W. H. Gibson and John Beatty; Governor R. B. Hayes and Ex-Governor Walter Harriman, of New-Hampshire, and a host of local speakers. In Pennsylvania, the Democrats have not, apparently, relied much upon the influence of public meetings, preferring to work by the more silent, but perhaps not less effective means, of personal appeals. In Ohio, however, they have employed General Samuel F. Cary, Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks; Governor Haight, of California; Hon. A. G. Thurman, General George W. Morgan, Hon. P. Van Trump, General Durbin Ward, Hon. Lewis D. Campbell, Attorney-General Hamilton and others. Mr. Pendleton, who is suffering from a recent fall from a carriage, has made but one brief speech during the campaign.

The elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Iowa all occur on Tuesday, Oct. 12. On Wednesday, the 20th, California will choose Judges of the Supreme Court. Other elections of minor importance are to be held during the month.

The tickets nominated by the opposing parties in Pennsylvania are as follows:

Republican.	Democratic.
For Governor.
John W. Geary.	Asa Packer.
For Judge of the Supreme Court.
Henry W. Williams.	Cyrus L. Pershing.

General GEARY is the present Governor of the State. The vote for Auditor-General in October, 1868, was as follows: Republican, 331,416; Democratic, 321,739; Republican majority, 9,677 in a total of 653,155 votes. The vote for President in November was: GRANT, 342,280; SEYMOUR, 312,832; GRANT's majority 29,448, in a total of 645,098. The Legislature last year was politically divided as follows:

	Senate.	House.
Republicans	19	63
Democrats	11	39
Republican majority	7	24

This gave the Republicans a majority of 27 on joint ballot. The State Senate consists of thirty-three members, holding office for three years, one-third going out each year. Of the eleven Senators who retired at the close of the last session seven were Republicans and four Democrats. One Senator has resigned, and twelve are therefore to be elected on the 12th inst. Ten Republicans and eleven Democrats hold over. The Pittsburg Gazette says that the main contests for Senators will be in the Beaver and Bedford Districts and Philadelphia. Should the Republicans succeed in the former two they will have an assured majority in the Senate, and they may gain one member in Philadelphia. The Republicans had eleven members from Philadelphia in the last House, and they hope to increase this number in the next.

In Ohio the nominations for State officers are as follows:

Republican.	Democratic.
For Governor.
Rutherford B. Hayes.	George H. Pendleton.
For Lieutenant-Governor.
John C. Lee.	Thomas J. Godfrey.
For Judge of Supreme Court.
Luther Day.	William J. Gilmore.
For Treasurer.
Sidney S. Warner.	Stephen Buhrer.
For Attorney-General.
Francis B. Pond.	John McConnell.
For Member of Board of Public Works.
Richard R. Porter.	Benjamin P. Churchill.

General RUTHERFORD B. HAYES, Republican, is the present Governor of the State, he having been elected two years since; but the last Legislature was Democratic, and elected Hon. A. G. THURMAN United States Senator, in place of Hon. BENJAMIN F. WADE.

The temperance men are also in the field, and at first nominated J. E. INGERSOLL for Governor, but he declined, as separate political action on the part of the Prohibitionists did not meet his approval. They then placed Mr. SAMUEL SCOTT, of Dayton, in nomination for the position, and he has signified his acceptance. Judging from the result of the similar movement in Maine, the vote for the Prohibitionists' candidate will not be large.

At the last election in October, 1868, the vote for Secretary of State stood as follows: Republican, 367,005; Democratic, 349,069; Republican majority, 17,933, in a total of 716,747 votes. The vote for President in November following resulted as follows: GRANT, 280,128; SEYMOUR, 268,700; GRANT's majority, 41,428. The Legislature last year was divided as follows:

	Senate.	House.
Republicans	17	49
Democrats	20	55
Democratic majority	3	7

This gave the Democrats a majority of ten on joint ballot. The Republicans during the present canvass have been making great exertions in order to overcome this majority and to secure the vote of Ohio toward the ratification of the proposed Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. This amendment has been heartily supported by the Republicans throughout the campaign, and it has been no less heartily opposed by the Democrats. The questions of the tariff and the payment of the national bonds have also been made prominent in the canvass.

In Iowa the State tickets placed in the field are:

Republican.	Democratic.
For Governor.
Samuel Merrill.	George Gillaspy.
For Lieutenant-Governor.
Madison M. Walden.	A. R. Richardson.
For Judge of Supreme Court.
John F. Dillon.	W. F. Birdsall.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction.
Abraham Skinsell.	Edward Jaeger.

Governor SAMUEL MERRILL has been renominated, he having been elected to the office two years since. The vote for President last November was as follows: GRANT, 120,399; SEYMOUR, 74,040; GRANT's majority, 46,359 in a total of 194,439. The Legislature last year was politically divided as follows:

	Senate.	House.
Republicans	42	96
Democrats	5	14
Republican majority	37	70

This gave a Republican majority of 107 on joint ballot. Of the members of the last Senate twenty-two Republicans and four Democrats hold over. In 1868 Iowa voted on a proposed amendment to the State Constitution, striking out the word "white" from the clause stating the qualifications of electors, and adopted it by a majority of 24,235 in a total of 186,506 votes.

In California the general State election occurred in August; that for Judges of the Supreme Court comes in October. The two were separated by an amendment to the State Constitution in order that the Bench might be removed as far as possible from the corrupting influences of politics. The San Francisco Alta California complains, however, that nothing has been gained by the change, except an increase of the public apathy in the election of the most important officers of the State, the number of votes polled at a judicial election being usually twenty-five per cent less than at a general election. As a remedy for this, the Alta calls for "a permanent judiciary—a judiciary that cannot be swayed by every gust of passion and every turn in politics."

At the election in August, which was for members of the Legislature only, no State officers being chosen this year, the State was carried by the Democrats, and they will have a very large majority in both houses. The vote of the State for President was: GRANT, 54,338; SEYMOUR, 54,076; GRANT's majority, 514, in a total of 108,670. Hon. HENRY H. HAIGHT, the present Governor, is a Democrat, and was elected in 1867. His term will expire in December, 1871.

In West Virginia an election of members of the Legislature takes place on Thursday, Oct. 28, and the contest has acquired additional interest from the fact that leading Republicans in several counties have recently inaugurated a movement in favor of the removal of political disabilities from those who took part in the rebellion. Last year the Republicans had a majority of 49 on joint ballot in the Legislature, the two Houses being divided as follows:

	Senate.	House.
Republicans	19	41
Democrats	3	12
Republican majority	16	29

POLITICAL CONVENTIONS.

Calls have been issued for the following political Conventions, to be held during the present month:

Oct. 5.—Minnesota State Temperance Convention, in St. Paul.

Oct. 7.—Maryland Democratic State Convention, in Baltimore.

Oct. 7.—Minnesota State People's Convention, in St. Paul.

Oct. 12.—Maryland Republican State Convention, in Baltimore.

Oct. 12.—Arkansas Democratic State Convention in Little Rock—called by the opponents of Governor CLAYTON.

Oct. 19.—Georgia Colored Man's State Labor Convention, in Macon.

Oct. 20.—National Capital Convention, in St. Louis.

LITERARY NOTES.

Among the new French works now attracting attention in Paris are: Les Fiancés de Christine d'Espagne, by PAUL GRIMM; a new edition of Parisiens, by ROBERTON ROQUEPLAN; Les Dieux du Jour—Satires et Portraits, by FELIX DUBOURG; Les Bourses-Papier, (paper burners,) Roman Boutique Vendôme, by ALFRED DE BOUGY; Une Page de l'Histoire d'Angleterre—les Elections de 1868, le Cabinet Gladstone, la Réforme de l'Eglise d'Irlande, by ED. HERVE; Les Associations Ouvrières Anglaises, (trades' unions,) by the Comte DE PARIS, and the Ménagerie Intime of THEOPHILE GAUTIER. The Comte DE PARIS' book has been largely noticed by the English Press. Its sale has now been reduced to a franc. The publishers must have a large sale for this to be remunerative, since the book is well gotten up and contains nearly 500 pages. THEOPHILE GAUTIER's book is chiefly about his own and other people's lapdogs. There is also some account of lizards and lizard-taming, and a description of a pair of ponies which he was obliged to sell during "the revolution of February, when a great deal of the pavement was displaced for patriotic purposes, and when our credit with our corn factor came suddenly to an end, and the newspapers in which we wrote came to an end also."

M. ROQUEPLAN's new book, Parisiens, is making some stir. The author formed the name by analogy. "On dit (says his preface) strychnine, quinine, nicotine. * * * Je dis; 'Parisien,'" (essence of Paris, so to speak.) The book aims at catching the manners, humors and extravagances of the gay capital on the wing, and fixing them for other nations to admire. The whole is a protest, not over stern, against "people of the period." The petit cuvée is matched by the arcelle. The cocotte is no modern introduction. In old Athenian days she fattened upon Persian satrapes, just as her modern representative does on boyards and Russian Princes. Apropos of this class, we are told a good deal about CORA PEARL and the beauty of her riding and the expensiveness of her stables. MARIE DUPLESSIS, too, the original of the "Dame aux Camellias," is honored with a biographical notice, the earlier part of her down-hill life (la descente the French call it) being simply hinted at, up to the time when, as adopted daughter of an octogenarian diplomatist, she became famous. Though he treads on dangerous ground, says the St. James Chronicle, M. ROQUEPLAN always manages to keep clear of "dirt." He is amusing and decent; but we cannot think that satire like his is calculated to do much good; it is so refined that very few of those whom it is to correct would feel the point of it. He has some good chapters on marriage, showing, of course, the evils which inevitably spring from mariages de convenance; how, a few months after the wedding, the husband inevitably takes his plongeon—i. e., goes back to his bachelor habits—while his wife soon finds that she can't keep her health without moving off every season to the baths, sea or inland, where very often she is allowed to go about alone, a femme incomprise.

A new edition has lately been published in London of COBBETT's History of the Reformation, which has prompted Mr. CHARLES HASTINGS COLLETTE to write "A Reply to Cobbett's History of the Reformation." Mr. COLLETTE declares COBBETT's to be "the most untruthful history that has ever emanated from the English Press," which there have not been wanting critics to say very often before. Indeed there never was yet an historian, from THUCYDIDES to BUCKLE, of whom, given the standpoint and opinions of the critic, the same may not be said.

It is said that the "prepared" of the famous Newton-Pascal letters has been discovered. A man lately arrested in Paris on a charge of forgery, is supposed, says the Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, to be the originator of the letters of PASCAL, NEWTON and GALILEO, the appearance of which created so much excitement three years ago. In England every one has long thought these papers spurious; but in France, M. CHASLES, their literary godfather, still clung to the belief that they were genuine, in spite of the proof to the contrary adduced by the late Sir DAVID BREWSTER, in England, and by MM. HENRY MARTIN, FAUGERE and LEVERRIER, in France. Only last month, adds the correspondent, we have quoted:

"At a stormy meeting of the Academie des Sciences, M. CHASLES again declared his belief in the genuineness of the documents produced by him, although he still declined to give any clue to their origin. It would seem that after this meeting to much pressure was put on M. CHASLES to disclose the name of the man who had brought him the papers that he at length gave way. Information was at once sought for as to the occupations of the person named. It was found that he was an assiduous student in the reading-room of the Bibliotheque Impériale, and that there was a striking coincidence between his research in the library and the appearance of new documents bearing on the Newton-Pascal controversy. He was also shown to be in the habit of frequenting the MSS. department and studying the handwriting of GALILEO, PASCAL, &c.—in fact, the suspicion against him became so strong that last week M. CHASLES himself applied for a warrant against his purveyor of MSS., who was, as I have said, arrested on a charge of forgery on Friday last."

A new fortnightly scientific paper has appeared in Troy, N. Y., called the Polytechnic, and published, we presume, in the interest of that excellent institution, the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. The new journal is well printed and well written, and as a field of usefulness is open to such a publication that can be cultivated with great profit, we wish the Polytechnic substantial success. It is, by the way, a remarkable attestation of the excellence of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute that an application for admission to the class of Division A should have been received by the director of the Institute from a graduate of very high standing of the United States Military Academy, West Point, even being, according to the Polytechnic, the fact.

Mr. S. BARING GOULD's new book, The Origin and Development of Religious Belief, is criticised at great length by the English Press. In the first part, which is all that has so far appeared, Mr. GOULD confines his attention to Heathenism and Mosaism. The work is avowedly written from a philosophic not a religious point of view. That is to say it is an attempt on a positive basis to account for the religious instincts of humanity. The truth of Revelation is not assumed, nor even the existence of a God. Such topics are avoided, and the argument rests solely on demonstration. The Bible is only used as an historical record. As we understand such reviews as we have seen, Mr. GOULD does not deny the truth of Christianity or the inspiration of the Scriptures; but by the limitations of his argument does not include any consideration of these points.

M. AMEDEE THIERRY, the writer of the freshly-published History of Gaul Under the Romans, has been engaged upon that imperishable work for forty years, an instance of protracted labor upon a single book which has hardly a parallel in the annals of literature. This author is not to be confounded with his brother, AUGUSTIN THIERRY, author of the History of the Norman Conquest.

AMUSEMENTS.

Announcements for To-Night.

The first performance of "Twelfth Night" will be given this evening at the Fifth-Avenue Theatre, Mrs. SCOTT-SIDDONS acting Viola. "The Streets of New-York" will be performed at the Olympic, Mr. J. K. MOUTRIER and Miss ELISA NEWTON filling the principal parts. "The Tempest" will be reproduced at the Grand Opera House, with Misses ANNIE DELAND and LISA WEBER, and Messrs. WHEATLEIGH, TAYLOR, and TILTON. Miss LEO HUDSON will figure in "Masepa" at the Bowery.

Notes for the Week.

Several benefit performances take place this week. The misguided artiste of the French troupe are to profit by a representation of "Le Songe d'Une Nuit d'Eté" at the Theatre Francais on Wednesday, and by one of "Robert le Diable" at the Academy on Friday. M. DUCHESNE, the first and greatest of numerous General Bounds, is to benefit by an entertainment at the Theatre Francais Saturday. A week later the Director and Professors of the American Conservatory of Music will unite in giving a concert at Irving Hall, the proceeds accruing to the Avondale fund. A new singer, a Swede, M. SALMSON by name, will on the latter occasion be heard for the first time in this country. Apropos of conservatories, it is worth recording that one of these excellent institutions, the European Conservatory, gave a sacred concert last evening at Allemania Hall in East Sixteenth-street. An interesting programme was interpreted by Mme. DE LUSSAN and Messrs. WARD, STERNBERGER, HEINECKE and OTTO.

CURRENT NOTES.

General SHERIDAN attended the Wisconsin State Fair at Madison on Friday. He declined to make any remarks, but a special dispatch says that Senator MAT. CARPENTER made "a remarkable speech in regard to the monopolies of railroad, express, and other companies which by their grasping, are ruining the country."

The order of exercises at the inauguration of President ELIOT, at Harvard College, on the 19th inst., will be as follows: Music by a choir, under the direction of J. K. PAINE, University Professor of Music; oration by J. S. WHITE, of the Senior Class; ceremony of induction, by Ex-Governor CLIFFORD, President of the Board of Overseers; address by President ELIOT; prayer by Rev. Dr. PEABODY. Subsequently a reception will be given by President ELIOT at his residence.

California cries aloud for immigration,—for a thrifty, industrious and energetic population, who will develop the resources of the country, and build up homes and industrial interests in the State. Some disappointment has resulted from the failure of the Pacific Railroad to fulfill the extravagant anticipations indulged in just previous to its opening.

Canadian papers generally have recently complained of the deficient accommodation for the insane in the New Dominion, and have demanded that the Government officials should rouse themselves from their apathy and do something. But now the Montreal Gazette says that it seems as if the whole matter were destined to end in the smoke of a ridiculous battle over ugly side issues.

The Philadelphia contributions to the Avondale Relief Fund amount to $33,687 22.

An Ex-Judge of Probate in Oxford County, Me., has been indicted by the Grand Jury for fraudulently altering a deed of real estate. He was arraigned, pleaded not guilty and was admitted to bail in $6,000.

A Lynchburg paper announces that a young gentleman from Paris has arrived in that city, en route to enter as a student at General LEE's college. Possibly Paris, Ky., is meant.

The International Industrial Exhibition, which will open at Buffalo on Wednesday, promises so prove not only interesting but important. The locality, building and management are all favorable to the success of the enterprise, and the large number of articles forwarded for exhibition warrant the inference that visitors will be pleased and instructed. The exhibition will continue during the month.

Commodore J. W. HANCOX, of this City, has obtained from the Venezuelan Government permission to run two steamers on the Orinoco River from its mouth to the furthest point in the State navigable, about 150 miles. He intends to construct a railroad, to cross the most populous districts of the State, and to form a connection with the steamers' traffic on the Orinoco.

WESTON announced at Marshall, Mich., a few days ago, that he had engaged in his last walking match in this country, and that he is now going to visit England, France, Austria, Italy and Russia. For his own sake, it is to be hoped he doesn't intend to "walk" there.

In view of the recent disturbances in Philadelphia, the Telegraph calls upon the Legislature to prohibit torchlight processions of political clubs, or partisan organizations of any kind whatever. Such processions are already prohibited by State law within ten days preceding an election.

The Indiana Democratic State Convention is to be held in Indianapolis on the 6th of January next. It will nominate candidates for Secretary of State, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Judges of the Supreme Court.

The Savannah Republican vigorously opposes the proposition to readmit the expelled negro members of the Georgia Legislature to their seats, and it calls upon the Legislature to refuse to ratify the Fifteenth Amendment. In regard to the first, it says that the Legislature cannot recast the expelled members without stultifying itself; and in regard to the second, that "Georgia had better be subjected to military rule for twenty years to come than give her sanction to the vile and degrading measure."

Judge JOSEPH WOODWARD has declined the Republican nomination for member of Assembly in Warren County.

The Boston, Hartford and Erie Railroad has just completed the purchase of the following property on Broad and Federal streets, Boston: French's wharf, having a frontage of 104 feet; Richardson's wharf, with a frontage of 148 feet; and Piper's wharf, 115 feet; giving to the Company a total frontage of 480 feet, with a depth to the Commissioners' line of 800 feet. The purchase money will amount to nearly three millions of dollars.

JUBAL A. EARLY has returned to Lynchburg, Va. He is represented to be looking better and seeming in better spirits than at any time since SHERIDAN sent him whirling up the valley.

The Chicago Post denies that the frost last week materially injured the corn in Illinois, and it thinks that there is now no room to doubt that the corn crop of the year is by odds the most bountiful ever produced in this country, or that the quality of the grain is unusually good.

The Charleston Courier, the oldest journal in South Carolina, has just been enlarged.

Hon. WALTER L. SESSIONS publishes a card in the Jamestown Journal, announcing that he is not a candidate for the Senate in the Thirty-second District, and saying: "I desire the success and harmonious action of our party, and believe that the election of either of the three gentlemen spoken of in Cattaraugus in connection with the office of Senator would be an honor to our cause."

The Petersburg Index refuses to indorse the request of Southern ladies for pecuniary aid from Mr. PEABODY, saying: "We believe the men of this section able and willing to take care of these women. If not, we shall not belie our belief, and belittle our manhood, by helping any cause which relies upon begging to secure its objects."

The Charleston News says that many wild rumors are afloat in that city and along the coast in regard to that "tidal wave," which, it has been predicted in England, will drench the seaboard about the end of this week.

The Petersburg Express, after reading the statement that the Minnesota Democratic State Convention indefinitely postponed a resolution opposing the Fifteenth Amendment, says that these Northwestern Democrats are really beginning to discover that the Democratic principles of BUCHANAN went down with the rebellion.

BOSTON.

Art and Literature—Marwkha's Silhouettes—Whittier's Ballads, his Poems, and his Prose—Gough's Autobiography—The Byron-Stowe Scandal—A Poem by Tupper—The Lecture Season—Senator Sumner's Engagements.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BOSTON, Saturday, Oct. 2, 1869.

In a recent letter I mentioned that the ROBERTS BROTHERS were engaged in getting out for the coming holiday SHAKESPEARE's "Midsummer Night's Dream," illustrated with twenty four silhouettes by F. KAMMWKA. I have seen proofs of the illustrations, and can confidently assert that the volume deserves to be one of the most popular, as it certainly will be one of the most unique, that the season will furnish. The artist is a young German, with little or no reputation, but his work bears the stamp of a genius as real and unmistakable as that of CRUIKSHANK, of DORE or of DARLEY. Comic works have frequently been illustrated with these shadow pictures, but it is quite safe to say that no literary work of the importance of one of SHAKESPEARE's dramas has ever before received their aid. To describe these silhouettes is absolutely impossible, and even if words could express the force and beauty of the designs, the reader would accuse the writer of an enthusiasm that should be foreign to the impartial critic. Not only has the artist grappled with and overcome the difficulties that attend the representation of the human body, but by these mere outlines he has contrived to shadow forth the disposition of the mind with as much delicacy as power. In illustration of this witness the quarrel of Hermia and Demetrius. The lady's scorn and contempt, and her companion's entreaty and expostulation cannot be mistaken. The illustration of the line—

"Mislead night wanderers, laughing at their harm," is marvelous in its expression of action and life. The little sprites are full of motion, and their grotesque attitudes are more eloquent than a whole dictionary of words could possibly be. The art, also, which has managed the foreshortening of the leg of the topmost fairy is beyond all praise. In the two representations of Oberon and Titania the artist shows his thorough knowledge of the human figure as well as a wonderful dexterity in the delineation of light and flowing drapery. In another silhouette, where Titania converses with Bottom, the poise of her figure is inimitable, and only finds a counterpart in the picture of the little fairy who shoulders a bulrush and paces sentinel-like before his sleeping Queen. Moonshine, in his thorn-bush, with his dog and lantern, is a triumph of technical skill; no one can look upon the design without feeling that in the drawing of the dog, at least, the artist has availed himself of the utmost resources of his art. These silhouettes, which I have attempted to sketch in a rough and cursory way, are no better than many others in the two dozen, while there is not one that does not exhibit proofs of the author's genius. Some of the designs are a little marred to the nicely critical eye by what appears to be an incongruity in dress. Hermia and Helena are represented in flounced and puffed gowns, and with panters and waterfalls that smack decidedly of modern fashions; and even in the picture of ——School days' friendship, childhood innocence,

the reticules and head-dresses wear a fresh and modern air. In those designs where the human figure is represented in a nude state, the effect is almost statuesque. The lines are as sharp and the figures are as chaste as though cut in marble, and the diversity of expression in all of them is truly surprising. HERR KOREWKA, whoever he may be, has done a work which the greatest artist of the age might well be proud to own. The original edition was printed for an English publisher in Strasbourg, I believe, and only five hundred copies were struck off. It was published in England at rather an unfortunate time of the year, but the ROBERTS BROTHERS will have all the advantages a season can offer. WELCH, BIGELOW & Co. will print the volume on plate paper, with a red-line border, and a steel engraving of one of Boston's beauties will adorn the title-page.

WHITTIER'S BALLADS.

A totally different book, and one quite the equal of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," from an artistic point of view alone, is found in JOHN G. WHITTIER's Ballads of New-England. It comprises ten of the poet's best lyrics or ballads, illustrated with fifty-eight drawings by HARRY FENN, SOL EYTINGE, WINSLOW HOMER, ALFRED FREDERICKS, GRANVILLE PERKINS, F. O. C. DARLEY, SAMUEL COLMAN, W. J. HENNESSEY and J. W. ENNINGER, twenty-nine of which are the work of the artist first named. Mr. FENN's contributions deserve warm praise. His sharp though diminutive sketches of New-England scenery have never been excelled, and in this department of art he is hardly surpassed by the best English artists. He reminds strongly of BIRKET FOSTER, and that famous artist has rarely done anything better than two of FENN's illustrations to "Cobbler Keezar's Vision"—"Down on the Sharp-horned Ledges" and "Still in the Summer Twilights," or than the "Green Isles of Casco Bay," or the drawing on the page which contains the opening stanzas of "The Changeling." They are simply perfect; black and white could do nothing more in the representation of a landscape than he has done in these instances. Mr. EYTINGE's pictures are noticeable for the sweet, tender faces of the women, as well as for those characteristics made familiar by the "Christmas Carol." GRANVILLE PERKINS' sea-pieces are of course all that could be desired, and his "Looked for the coming that might not be" in "Skipper Ireson's Ride," is strong and touching in no ordinary degree. The poorest pictures are contributed by HOMER and HENNESSEY; the former especially seems not to have taken the requisite pains with his drawing, for the ancient and time-honored excuse of American artists—the engraver's carelessness or incompetency—cannot apply in a case where Mr. ANTHONY had the supervision and direction. The book as a whole is very nearly all that its publishers claim for it. The illustrations are so varied in subject and style, and combine so many excellencies that would have been almost impossible with another author or a less numerous corps of artists, that the Ballads will undoubtedly take rank with the finest specimens of book-making known to the new world. It will not be published until the last of the month.

WHITTIER'S COMPLETE WORKS.

Messrs. FIELDS, OSGOOD & Co. have just issued a two-volume edition of WHITTIER's poetical works, uniform with the Merrimack edition of his prose writings published two or three years ago. The Quaker poet is said to think more highly of his prose than of his verse, but a majority of his readers will differ with him. His prose, to be sure, combines the happiest qualities of the scholar with the earnest utterances of the agitator and reformer; but however pleasant it may be to read these essays, the great public which WHITTIER has created for himself will not be apt to form an intimate acquaintance with them. Our poet has given expression to all the emotions and aspirations of the people among whom he dwells. His poetry mirrors their sternest thought and their tenderest sentiment; it expresses their loves and hates with the same force and fidelity with which it reproduces the natural scenery that surrounds them. His prose cannot do this; it may and does retain all the prominent characteristics of its author's poetry, but its current runs in a comparatively narrow channel, with no noise or dash—with scarcely a ripple—and its existence will forever remain unsuspected by many who have been exultingly borne along on the broad, resistless stream of his verse. Those who do find it out will discover a rare delight, and they will be sure to thank the publishers for the elegant dress which has been given to Mr. WHITTIER's complete works.

MR. JOHN B. GOUGH'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

Mr. GOUGH's autobiography is rapidly approaching completion. It is said that the famous lecturer has written nearly all of his recollections between midnight and morning, finding these hours more favorable to the working of his mind and memory; whereat it has been rather wittily suggested that his book should be called Gough's Night Thoughts. The autobiography will be one of peculiar and intense interest if the first fifty pages are a fair index of those that are to follow. Here are a few paragraphs from the third chapter, in which Mr. GOUGH records his departure from England for this country:

"A very important change in my fortunes now occurred. I was 12 years of age, and my father, being unable to furnish the premium necessary to my learning a trade, and having no prospect for me other than to be a gentleman's servant, made an agreement with a family of our village, who were about emigrating to America, that they, in consideration of the sum of ten guineas paid by him, should take me with them, teach me a trade and provide for me until I was 21 years of age. After much hesitation, my mother, from a sense of duty, yielded to this arrangement. I, boylike, felt in high glee at the prospect before me. My little preparations being completed, on the 4th of June, 1829, I took—as I then supposed—a last view of my native village. The evening I was about to depart, a neighbor invited me to take tea at her house, which I did. My mother remarked to me afterward: 'I wish you had taken no tea at your mother's house' and this little circumstance was a source of much pain to me in after years.

The parting from my be'oved parents was bitter. My poor mother folded me to her bosom; then she would hold me off at arm's length, and gaze fondly on my face, through her tearful eyes, bending as only a mother could—the book of futurity for me. She hung up, on the occasion of peg, my old cap and jacket, and my school box, and there they remained until years after, she quitted the house. At length the parting was over, words spoken, and I left the home of my childhood—perhaps, forever.

A touching scene it was, as I went through the village toward the coach office that evening. As I passed through the streets many a kind hand waved a farewell, and not a few familiar voices sounded out a hearty 'God bless you!' There was one old dame of whom I had frequently bought sweetmeats, at her green grocery, and who was familiarly called Granny Hoggner; she called me into her shop and loaded me with good wishes, bull's-eyes, cakes and candies, although, poor affectionate soul, she could ill-afford it. The coach was reached, and I was in company with another lad—who was going out with our family to meet a relative—I mounted the roof of the London night coach, and was quitting the village, when, on turning round to take a last look of it, I saw a crouching woman's figure by a low wall, near the bathing machines. My heart told me at once that it was my mother,—who had taken advantage of half an hour's delay at the inn door, and walked on some distance, to have one more glance at her departing child. I had never, till then, felt that I was loved so much.

My mother took our separation very keenly to heart. My sister has told me that she would sit, as if in deep thought, looking out in the distance, as though she saw something far away; and sometimes my sister would see her at night, standing by the window, looking out at the sea for hours. When spoken to on these occasions, she would start and sigh, and creep quietly to her bed.

On the 10th of June, everything being arranged, we sailed from the Thames in the ship Helen. Passing Dover, we arrived off Sandgate, when it fell a dead calm, and our anchors were dropped. I afforded some amusement to those around me by the eagerness with which I seized a telescope and the positiveness with which I averred that I saw my old home. During that day boat after boat came off to us from the shore, and friends of the family I knew with each other, visited us; but I was unnoticed; my relatives did not come. After long and weary watching, I saw a man standing up in a boat, with a white hand round his hat. 'That's he!—that's my father!'—I shouted. He soon got on deck, and almost smothered me with his kisses, which I returned with many tears. As his beard made very decided impressions on my smooth skin. I heard that my mother and sister had gone to a place of worship, at some distance from Sandgate; which I regretted much. When evening came on, our visitors from the shore repaired to their boats, to remain a few yards from the ship, formed in a half circle. Our friends stood up in them, and o'er the calm waters floated our blended voices, as we sung:

'Blest be the dear, uniting love
Which will not let us part
Our bodies may far hence remove—
We still are one in heart.'

Boat after boat then vanished in the gloomy distance, and I went to my bed. About midnight I heard my name called, and going on deck I there found my beloved mother and sister, who, hearing on their return that I was in the offing, had paid half a guinea (money hardly earned and with difficulty procured, yet cheerfully expended,) to a boatman to row them to the ship. They spent an hour with me, and O, how short it seemed!) then departed with many tears. Having strained my eyes till their boat was no longer discernible, I went back to my bed to sob away the rest of the morning."

Here is a letter, or an extract from a letter, which the young emigrant wrote to his parents while on shipboard:

"George and I are the only ones who have tumbled down the hatchway. George has fallen down twice. Once he hurt his side a little, and then he hurt his nose very much. I fell down with a kettle of hot water; but I held up the kettle, and though I was pretty well bumped I was not scalded. I wish another would fall on me to-night. Oh! when I think what a fuss I made when she combed my hair I am much ashamed of myself, and only wish she could do it now; for it is harder to do it myself than it was for her to do it."

These early pages contain several of his mother's letters, which are very interesting. They show her to have been a woman of admirable character, devoutly religious, patient and tender, and withal filled with an unutterable love for her only son. They are also remarkable as specimens of singularly pure and vigorous English.

MRS. BEECHER STOWE,

as the English journals all call her, is really at work upon a second article on the Byron scandal, and I have good authority for saying that it will appear some time next month—probably in the Atlantic for December. It is possible that the length will render this arrangement inexpedient, in which case the paper will appear in a pamphlet together with the original article. MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER has written some very savage verses in defence of BYRON, or rather of Mrs. LEIGH, which have never been published. A copy of the poem was received in this city a few days ago from the proverbial philosopher himself. It was in the form of a printed slip, but it has never been made public in England, nor, until now, in this country. Here is what its author calls

A LANCE FOR BYRON.

One tilt, in charity; this hideous charge,
Were the lie truth, should never have been uttered;
For death had set life's prisoners at large,
And Time forgot what jealousy had muttered;

And our pure English homes must not be drenched
Heedlessly thus with pestilential vapors,
That classic Byron's glory may be quenched
By witnesses filtered through the pools and papers;

And fifty years had past; and all who knew,
Sinners and sinned against, long since departed
And nothing could be sure, as false or true,
About the guilty and the broken-hearted.

But—to tredmee the dead, who may not speak,
Through wormed-out confidences of the dying,
And, apiy, on the innocent to wreak
A wife's revenge, through author-craft in lying.—

Demurely to convict of horrid crime
(Impossible alike of proof or answer)
A Name till now a treasure for all time,
But just found out, forsooth, a moral Cancer,—

To blacken his "corrupt corpse," long in blame,
By calumnies incredible and hateful—
Dishonour a friend of our fathers "with a deed for which to thee the world is grateful?"

No! we denounce thee; by that widow's bed
Thou cured, poverty, penurious, prying,
Bribed by a scribbler's fee to damn the dead,
And bribe the slanderous secrets of the dying!

But Mr. TUPPER comes too late to make a very great sensation. The extraordinary interest which was aroused in this disagreeable subject is rapidly abating, and even Mrs. STOWE's vindication of herself will hardly succeed in renewing the excitement which prevailed a month ago. Before I quit the topic let me record a friend's epigrammatic summing up of the controversy:

APOTOS OF E. B. S.

Born on the rath of a reputation,
She told the vilest story ever known;
Of her success how bold the explanation;
She spoilt a reputation—'twas her own!

THE LECTURE SEASON

has begun—not on the platform but in committees. Mr. REDPATH's Lyceum Bureau, which is the agency for about two hundred leading lecturers and musical people who appear before lyceums in "combinations," is employed day and night in arranging "routes" and corresponding with secretaries. The bright particular star of the season is Senator SUMNER, who will lecture from Oct. 11 to Dec. 8, under the management of Mr. JAMES REDPATH and Mr. T. B. PUGH, of Philadelphia, who is in some way associated with him. Mr. SUMNER will lecture twenty-one evenings in New-England and sixteen outside of it, and thinking that his outside engagements might interest the readers of the TIMES, I have procured a list. The following are the places and dates:

Newark, Nov. 16; Trenton, Nov. 17; Poughkeepsie, Nov. 19; Elizabeth, Nov. 20; Paterson, Nov. 22; New-Brunswick, Nov. 23; Wilmington, Nov. 24; West Chester, Nov. 25; Lancaster, Nov. 26; Harrisburg, Nov. 27; Pottsville, Nov. 29; Reading, Nov. 30; Philadelphia, Dec. 1; Brooklyn, Dec. 2; New-York, Dec. 3.

His lecture is entitled "The Question of Caste." Mr. GOUGH, owing to the illness of his wife and the demands which the writing of his autobiography make upon his time, will lecture but very little this Winter, and all his engagements were made long ago. MARK TWAIN heads an imposing list of humorists in the number of his engagements. WENDELL PHILLIPS has more calls than he can comply with. WILLIAM PARSONS, the Irish orator, is the most popular name in New-England, among the new candidates for Lyceum honors. FRED. DOUGLASS and ROBERT COLLYER are very popular, and what time they choose to give to New-England is always readily filled up. A decidedly unique entertainment has been devised by Mr. REDPATH, and is included in the Union Course of Lectures. It consists in a debate on some topic of general interest between two gentlemen who are supposed to be specially fitted for the presentation and defence of the two sides of the question. For instance, on Monday evening, the 11th inst., HORACE GREELEY and Professor A. L. PERRY will discuss Free Trade. Later in the season, Rev. GILBERT HAVEN and Rev. J. D. FULTON will settle the question of Female Suffrage, and other similar combinations have been made. The Boston Lyceum Course will open on the 18th inst., with a new lecture by WENDELL PHILLIPS. This may be called the humorists' course, for the names of MARK TWAIN, JOSH BILLINGS, JOHN G. SAXE, the "Fat Contributor," and H. C. BARNABEE are on the list. A delegation of Shirley Shakers will occupy one evening with an exposition of "Shakerism—its Creed, Songs and Worship." It is almost needless to say that the sale of season tickets for this course has been unprecedented.

OAKHAM.

PERSONAL.

It is announced that JOHN DEERING, Jr., LL. B., will deliver, before lyceums and literary societies, during the coming lecture season, his lecture on "Five Years in Washington; a Record of Personal Experience in Peace and War," giving reminiscences of the persons and events that have made the Capital so conspicuous during the last few years.

A new lecture by Rev. EDWARD P. ROE is announced. In it he relates how General GRANT obtained secret information through scouts and by other means of the movements of General LEE's armies. The lecture is highly spoken of by those who have read

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The week now opening promises to be the busiest we have yet had this season. No sales will be made to-day, but during the next three days, though New-York, Brooklyn, Westchester County and New-Jersey property will be offered to keep busy for the rest of the week the auctioneers, their visitors and purchasers. The attendance at previous sales has been very good, the bidding prompt and the prices obtained satisfactory; public interest is not falling off in the least; on the contrary, it seems to be gaining, and it is risking but very little to predict for the sale now announced as large crowds and as gratifying results as have been heretofore obtained.

To-morrow at White Plains, N. Y., Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER will offer 300 lots and villa plots, finely located in the heart of the village, within a few minutes' walk of the depot and in close proximity to stores, churches and schools. The property is eligibly situated on high ground, commanding fine views, near the most prominent avenue in the place, adjacent to elegant and costly structures and in one of the most desirable sections for residences in the village. White Plains is only twenty-three miles from Twenty-sixth-street, New-York, and is accessible by numerous trains on the Harlem Railroad daily. It is the first station beyond New-York at which express trains stop. The New-York, Housatonic and Northern Railroad is promised to be built very soon, and a fine depot erected in the immediate vicinity of this property. The neighborhood is proverbially healthy, while the broad avenues, handsome public edifices, elegant private dwellings and refined society render the place, for residences, very desirable and attractive. During the past few months great improvements have been made in opening grand boulevards (100 feet wide) which have their termini here, and which will, when completed, form as fine drives as any in this country. The property to be sold is already for immediate improvement, and seven comfortable cottages are already in process of construction. The property has been in the possession of the Hatfield family for nearly one hundred years, and is now for the first time offered at public sale. The special train will leave the Harlem Railroad depot, corner Twenty-sixth-street and Fourth-avenue, at 10 o'clock A. M. precisely. Maps, free tickets and full particulars may be had at the auctioneers' offices, No. 25 Nassau-street, New-York, and No. 187 Montague-street, Brooklyn.

The same day, at Linden, N. J., Messrs. A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BRO., have a great sale of 250 building lots, situated immediately at the station, in the very heart of fine improvements. The Post Office is on the property, also the Linden Hotel, which will be sold the same day. Linden is an attractive and growing place, but forty-eight minutes from New-York by the New-Jersey Railroad, and two miles from Elizabeth, a city of thirty thousand inhabitants. The property to be sold is unexceptionable, the streets are being graded; the furthest lot offered is not more than five minutes' walk from the station, the nearest hardly as many seconds. The lots adjoin the property of FERDINAND BLANCKE, Esq., who will have pleasure in furnishing parties with maps and passes, as well as giving them full information regarding the property and neighborhood. The terms are particularly easy—ten per cent., and the auctioneers' fee of $10 a plot, on the day of sale, and $10 a month thereafter, with interest on deferred payments. The special train will leave the foot of Cortlandt-street at 11 o'clock A. M. Maps and free tickets may be had at the auctioneers' office, No. 26 Pine-street.

The same day, at the Exchange Salesroom, Messrs. A. J. BLECKER, SON & CO. will sell several pieces of west side improved property.

On Wednesday, at the Commercial Exchange, Brooklyn, Mr. J. COLE will sell twenty-seven lots, each 22x100; also on the property corner of Third-avenue and Eighteenth-street, a large frame house, well built, having modern improvements and splendid garden of fruit trees, vines, &c. The property will be sold in parcels to suit purchasers. Maps and particulars may be had at the auctioneer's office, No. 369 Fulton-street, Brooklyn, or of Mr. H. B. HUBBARD, No. 345 Fulton-street.

The same day, at the New-York Exchange Salesroom, Messrs. E. H. LUDLOW & Co. will sell several desirable lots on Third and Sixth avenues and Twenty-second, Twenty-third and Wyckoff streets, Brooklyn.

On Thursday two large suburban sales will be made, one at Madison, N. J., by Messrs. A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BRO., and one at Newtown by Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER. The property is in both cases quite attractive and of the kind which always find a ready market. Further particulars will be found in our advertising columns.

EXPLANATION.

The Editor of AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST has from time to time put up some COUNTRY HOMES, designed to be models of beauty, comfort and convenience. They are near his own residence, and intended to attract desirable neighbors. They are built with great economy, entirely for cash, and by the best workmen, who do twice as much for the same money as the ordinary run of mechanics. Every piece of timber and every item of work is of the best character—just such houses as any man would build for himself. Every little labor-saving convenience has been introduced, such as bath-room, stationary washtubs, bells, speaking tubes, &c., &c. The advantage of the economy in building is given to the purchaser, as the price is put at just the cost of building, with only a fair price for the large, beautiful lots on which the houses stand.

The houses are sold on very EASY TERMS of payment, say one-quarter cash, one-half on a long mortgage, and the balance on second mortgage, to be paid in quarterly or semi-annual payments, no larger than what one would pay for the rent of a similar house in the country. This enables mechanics and others to use their capital in their business, and yet be paying for a house while only paying rent.

Every house hitherto erected has been sold almost as soon as finished, or usually before. Two more new houses just being completed, are now offered to the first comers. For some idea of the character of these houses, see AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST for March, 1869, (No. 346, Broadway.) The two houses now offered are somewhat larger and an improvement upon those there described. The splendid improvements recently made in the New-York and Finishing Railroad, and still making in the new railroad to be opened in November, render Flushing the most accessible and most desirable place of residence near New-York. Thirteen trains per day now run each way, and the number will be largely increased on the opening of the new road in November. One can now come from Flushing to the City for daily business, or for evening entertainments, with much greater comfort and convenience than he can go down to the City Hall from 59th-st.

The above dwellings are worth looking after. The proprietor will usually be at No. 76 Broadway, from 12½ to 1½ o'clock daily.

SALE OF THE UNITED STATES ARMORY AND OTHER GROUNDS AT HARPER'S FERRY, WEST VA., AND VICINITY.

ORDNANCE OFFICE,

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1, 1869.

In pursuance of the act approved, Dec. 15, 1868, and by direction of the Secretary of War, the property of the United States at Harper's Ferry, West Va., and vicinity, will be sold at public auction, on TUESDAY, the 26th day of November, 1869, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. and continuing from day to day until all is sold.

The value of this property for manufacturing purposes is too well known to render it necessary to describe it herein, but a description of the same is being prepared and will be sent to the press shortly; and, if it can be so in time, will be printed, upon their applying by letter to this office.

The property will be sold in lots. The first will include the Armory, embracing a strip of land running to the Western boundary, at the Potomac, the Armory Canal, and water power of the river. The walls of two large buildings are standing on this property, and will be sold with it, if desired, also the water wheels, with gearing, and the frames are in almost perfect order. Three of them are turbines, of the most approved kind, and the others are mostly cast iron with wooden buckets.

The second will be the site of the Rifle Factory and water power on the Shenandoah, the buildings upon which have been destroyed, but the canal is in good order.

The third will be the Shenandoah Ferry, with a tract of 60 acres of land on the south, and a lot on the Harper's Ferry side, opposite.

The fourth will be the perpetual right to cut and remove wood from a tract of 1,500 acres mountain land near the Shenandoah River.

The fifth will be the right to dig iron ore from a tract of about 1,400 acres of land known as Friendly Ore Bank, acquired by deed from Henry Lee and others.

The remainder, consisting of houses and lots in the town, will be sold lot by lot.

The Government will convey to the purchaser, after payment shall have been made in full, all its right and title to the property, which is believed to be perfect in every case.

The terms of sale, prescribed by law, are a credit of one and two years, the purchaser to give bond and security for the payment of his purchase money; and these terms must be complied with within ten days after the sale.

A map, showing the metes and bounds of the Harper's Ferry property, will be exhibited at the time of sale.

The Government reserves the right to withdraw any or all lots offered, if the bids are not satisfactory.

A. B. DYER,

Brevet Major-General, Chief Ordnance.

NOTICE TO DELINQUENTS.

Persons who purchased lots in 1866, and have not fully paid for them, are notified that if they pay what is due before the day of sale, the lots will be deeded to them, otherwise they will be sold.

CUSTOM HOUSE, NORFOLK, VA.,

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, SEPT. 27, 1869.

I AM AUTHORIZED BY HON. GEO. S. BOUTWELL, Secretary of the Treasury, to offer for sale at public auction, on WEDNESDAY, Oct. 13, 1869, at the Custom House, Norfolk, at 12 o'clock M.,

THE OLD UNITED STATES MARINE HOSPITAL PROPERTY,

situated on Washington-street, in the County of Norfolk.

The building is of brick, three stories in height, and constructed in the most substantial manner. The lot fronts on the Elizabeth River, 200 feet 1½ inches, with an equal frontage on two wide streets and a ten-foot alley, the entire premises being inclosed with a solid brick wall.

The property is most beautifully located, is well adapted for a first-class academy or for a place of public resort, and, with a small outlay, the house could be modernized, thereby making it one of the most beautiful and attractive private residences in the State.

From its commanding situation excellent views can be had of the surrounding country and of the Elizabeth River for Lower Creek Island. These premises, from their close proximity to the City of Norfolk, where real estate is rapidly advancing, makes it a most desirable investment and well worthy the attention of capitalists.

TERMS OF SALE:

Three thousand dollars ($3,000) on the day of sale; the balance in four (4) equal quarter-yearly instalments, payable in gold, with interest from the 15th day of January, 1870, with interest from day of sale until paid.

Any failure on the part of the purchaser to make the payments as above will involve a forfeiture to the Government of the payments already made. All bids to be made subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, who reserves the right to reject any or all bids, if deemed to the interests of the Government to do so.

A certificate of sale will be given to the successful bidder upon the acceptance of his bid by the Secretary of the Treasury, and the deed executed when the last payments shall have been made.

A plat descriptive of the above property can be seen upon calling at this office.

LEWIS W. WEBB, Collector.

A. J. BLECKER, Auctioneer.

CHURCH SERVICES.

Duty of the Christian Church—Sermon by Rev. George H. Hepworth.

Services were resumed yesterday in the Church of the Messiah, corner of Thirty-fourth-street and Fourth-avenue. Dr. OSGOOD, the former pastor of the Church, who is now in Rome, has been succeeded by Rev. GEORGE H. HEPWORTH, late of Boston. Though the relations of Mr. HEPWORTH as pastor have been fully arranged, it is still undecided what is to be the amount of salary. Dr. OSGOOD received $6,000, and it is understood that the amount will be increased somewhat. Mr. HEPWORTH preached his first sermon yesterday, taking as his text the 7th verse of the 10th chapter of Matthew:

"And as ye go preach, saying the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand."

I think, Christian friends, he said, I can almost hear the echo of these words sounding through two centuries, pointing churches and men to their true Christian duties. It says the work of the ministry is practical, not doctrinal. It is to heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, and above all to tell the truth. The world needs to-day, as two centuries ago, a strong, brave voice to tell it its faults. The pulpit must shrink from no duty, and must criticise according to the standard which the Great Master has set up. It was time that we held our lives and our souls up to God's sunlight, so that we might know how strong and how weak we were. Take down our spires, and we lower at the same time the moral standard of the community; eliminate the Sabbath with its holy influences. What is the legitimate work of the pulpit, and how is it to be accomplished? For three hundred years the Church has been ecclesiastical. It had tried and tried in vain to form a creed acceptable to all men. We must needs have diversity of creeds and sects, varying like the hues of the rainbow, yet blended together in one picture. The Church has been teaching men how to get out of the world rather than how to live in it. The Catholics have literally accomplished this. The Protestant, not going to the same extreme, is satisfied to live in the world during six days of the week, but on the seventh he shuts himself in his place of worship, where no word must remind him that the great heaving world is outside. We might as well to-day as to-morrow admit the fact that that religion is best which teaches us to live in the world honest and pure lives. Naught but the power of God can lift us out of the world, and that Church is best which teaches us how to keep pure and unspotted from it. Our duty is to take the principles of Jesus and teach them to living, temporate men. Our business is to acknowledge that we are part of the world, and so to speak and act that the great mass shall receive the electric spark and profit by our high example. That church is true which opens its arms wide enough to take in all the world, looking up to and acknowledging but one great Father, with no dividing lines but those which are mere matter of convenience and to be trodden down by the towering heart. We must bid God-speed to every humane enterprise. While there is crime, the Church has no time for theological discussions, and it fails of its use if it forbears to open its mouth and denounce vice in whatever form it may present itself. Let us not spend our time in the attempt to prove one dogma true than another. While, outside, immortal souls are blackening for perdition; while the City shivers and shakes; while every brick feels its resting place unsafe; while the wood-hewer in Maine and the dweller on the far Western prairie see their cabins swept from above them; while the standard of financial morality is lowered little by little until men are driven to frenzy, and every portion of the country ashes and throbs with the confusion of this great centre, shall the Church talk of trinity or unity, of transubstantiation or consubstantiation? While there is one house in the City where a soul dims their moral eyesight while they dwell therein; while there are ten thousand cradles unrocked, and children grow up in an atmosphere of blasphemy and drunkenness; while four-fifths of the community never see the inside of a place of worship; while men, indifferent about their future welfare, there is naught for us to do but to scatter the seeds of holy influences around us. Shame on the Church which spends its time on questions which never can be settled, while crime stalks unmasked in our streets. Look back through the years of the past two thousand years, where stand at the other end the monumental halls of Jesus, whom we call the Christ. See Him as He walks the streets of Jerusalem or on the hillsides of Judea. Did He talk of trinity or unity? He put these all aside, preaching of God as the only one great almighty fact of a man's life. Did He assert the money-changers? He pointed the finger of scorn at them; not because they were money-changers, but because they were dishonest. He went about working practical good, healing the sick, cleansing the lepers, binding up the broken-hearted; and when the Sadducean sneer at the doctrine of a resurrection, he bids Lazarus come forth, and the sheeted dead pronounces the argument a lie. In conclusion, he urged his congregation to stand by him in an effort to work practical good in this community, condemn vice and encourage high morality.

Rev. H. T. Northrup on "Gold-Gambling."

Rev. H. T. NORTHRUP preached on this subject at the Twenty-third-street Presbyterian Church yesterday morning. His text was from Timothy vi. 9: "But they that will be rich fall into great temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition." He said: How many men in New-York accept the words of the text as true. Christian men believe it, but the majority of men would rather take the risk of the temptation, the snare and the perdition than not to have the riches. They think it is a false alarm; they do not consider it real. In fact there is nothing real to them except money, and this opinion they hold in the very teeth of some of the plainest statements of God's word. If ever any people had occasion to believe that the unlawful determination to be rich carries with it a snare and is fraught with evil sure and swift, that people is our own. Financial crises in this country, when wealth bursts like the bubble that it is, have become periodical and chronic. We have the broadest acres, the grandest rivers, the vastest national resources, and we also have the most stupendous money panics, of any nation on the face of the globe. Things go on smoothly and prosperously as they ought to; then there comes a storm, a whirlwind and earthquake, all combined, leaving nothing but chaos and ruin behind. Gold jugs about in fitful fashion; stocks rise and fall, and play such peculiar antics as to make men weep; big houses are seized with destruction; houses break like exploded bombshells, and, amid the general wreck men do not know what they are worth. We have had one of these periodical convulsions during the last few days, and it is will only sweep the chaff away so that it will never come back, it will be a public blessing. This whole thing is one stupendous farce, except in its results—these are serious enough. It is true that the pulpit, if it has any voice at all, should be heard and heeded, and so far from appearing to be the proper place for such a subject for discourse, I do not believe I should be justified in omitting it. I have a much better right to denounce gamblers than they have to gamble. It must be evident to any one who has the faculty of looking beneath the surface of things that there are latent causes, lying deep and far away, which will account for all that financial distress which overtakes men. In the confusion of excitement we are apt to see only what lies on the surface, forgetting that the actors come from behind the scenes. We hear the crash when fortunes fall, and then the men we discover have embarrassments, troubles and failures; but back of all this there are causes steadily at work producing the inevitable work. The evil that crops out on the surface comes from the evil within. Let us proceed to the causes which produce this state of things. One of these is that utter incapacity for business which appears in the case of some persons to be inseparable from their existence. There are those who begin with nothing and end with a fortune and vice versa. Fine business talents are just as much a gift as mathematical genius, and you may give some men abundance of capital and it does them no good—they contrive to lose it all. Everything seems to turn out bad, and they need some one to look after and direct them as much as if they were still children. They may be capable men in many respects. They might succeed in many professions, but not in others; but the fact is they don't know how to take the world; they are not bright. Others turn everything they touch into money. I would rather go out West and clear up a swamp than come to New-York without that lawful shrewdness to fit me for the battle of life. Another cause is extravagance and a desperate effort to gratify pride and keep up appearances. However poor people may be, they generally like to be considered rich, and it has become so common for such to put on the appearance of wealth, and live beyond their means, that the thing is taken as a matter of course. I would rather be a poor man, honest and industrious, than to be like the gamblers of Wall-street, who play the hypocrite and defraud and cause incalculable misery. This subject possesses all the attributes over masquerade; we see what lies upon the surface, but we are not sure whether we are dealing with appearances or realities. We are dazzled by the glitter, and do not know whether it is gold or dross. You see a young man who seems to know enough and appears full of promise; can you give any reason why he should not turn out well? But he likes display; he is fond of a fine appearance. Some keep up a certain style, and will keep it up, if they have to steal or borrow. The show must be kept up. I was asked in the crush of 1857, in Europe, whether it was the extravagance of the ladies that ruined their husbands, and I wish the women of this country would repel the insinuation. Extravagance is one of the curses of society. Another cause of financial failure, and one closely allied to that, is love of pleasure. A fast life is expensive and short. The faster you go the sooner you come to evil. Your liquors eat out your life and pocket. There is no poverty like that of a drunkard. Your horses cost money to keep them, and a thousand other expenses go with them. Theatre bills mount up, and you must see every new play, and turn your life upside down. Depend upon it we have touched the spot where many a fortune is lost—to go just here that many an immortal soul goes down plunging for the pleasures of the world. Having illustrated these points, he said, he would now speak of the financial error which visits us periodically and as much harder to set right. That is the financial agency operating in the numerous cliques of Wall-street and the one which immediately gives has brought about these [illegible] the laws of Providence and [illegible] rest of mankind. It is [illegible] says: "They that will be rich" [illegible] men who shall [illegible] the country, and it [illegible] to learn a lesson [illegible] giving a [illegible] to give something [illegible] amount received. This [illegible] morality unfashionable. They are ashamed to work but they are not ashamed to gamble or steal, or lead themselves to dishonesty and fraud. These are the ones taken up with sudden riches. Is it not easy enough to buy at 135 and sell at 140 or 150; and then take the risk, and so save themselves they throw honor and honesty overboard and devise all manner of means to accomplish their object. Cliques are formed and men band themselves together for profit to themselves and misery to others. In point of fact, there is no movement in Wall-street, containing honor. We come in the second place to inquire what cure can be suggested for these evils already described. It is these that will be rich who fall in temptation. So long as people believe in the pleasures of riches and their potency, there will be these fluctuations and conspiracies in Wall-street. The proper remedy seems to be a clearer estimate of riches and a higher estimate of other and better things. So long as man believes that money is the best thing in the universe—better than honesty, better than virtue, better than truth, better than salvation—he will sacrifice everything in Heaven and in earth for its attainment. So long as he holds this view he will employ fair or foul means, and allow nothing to thwart him. His judgment upon the matter must be corrected. Yet, money in itself is a good thing. It drives the wheels of business and commerce, and accomplishes many good purposes both in religious, philanthropic and charitable circles; but it is not good when prostituted to wrong ends, or dishonestly or selfishly used. We have no right to stake honesty and truth, time and eternity upon the chances for a fortune. It is a very convenient religion which will let a man pray in his church on a Sunday, and gamble in Wall-street on a Monday. The one great reproach upon the Church of the present day is that her members are just as tricky and sharp and dishonest as others—they are so mighty pious up-town and nowhere else. It is not for me to say how financial evils are to be remedied, whether by Government interference or in some other way. I want you to learn that selfishness is not noble, but rather study the footsteps of Him who became poor that we might be rich. We have already had a vision of the mania for lucre. These men will soon pass Wall-street on their way to Green Wood. The time is not far distant when the Wall-street of to-day will be silent.

Opening of the First Reformed Church, Williamsburg — Improvements in Church Architecture—Sermon by Rev. Elbert S. Porter, D. D.

The construction of a church edifice is usually a matter of considerable public importance, but it has been too much the custom to look for stately aspect, magnificence, georgeousness and exact symmetry, losing sight of other elements that ought to enter into the scientific branch of the architect's plans. True science never conflicts with true art. This axiom is grandly sustained in the new structure of the First Reformed Church, Williamsburg. A thorough system of ventilation and heating has been combined with all the considerations of taste and ornamentation, so that while all that is perfect is eye beautiful, and really giving many points freedom and freshness which would be lost sight of in a close, "churchy" atmosphere. In addition to this, while the windows are of stained glass of exquisite design, from the factory of Mr. Bloening, in Atlantic-avenue, care has been taken to have a softened or subdued light—plenty of it, and this in utter contempt of the "dim religious light" notion which obtains in some otherwise good-looking structures. The building itself is of pressed brick, with Nova Scotia stone trimmings, and the style is that known as Romanesque. The character of the building is new for Bedford-avenue, and while it presents a fine contrast with the other churches on the avenue, is not less ornamental. It has a front of eighty-two feet on Bedford-avenue, and a depth of 110 feet on Clymer-street. The chapel and school in rear of the church will have a front of thirty-six feet on Clymer-street and a depth of ninety-five feet. The interior of the church is furnished with black walnut pews, is nicely carpeted throughout, and has accommodation in the body of the house for 900 persons. The gallery is divided off by open railwork into twenty-two parlors or sitting apartments, each furnished with five chairs and a table, an entirely new feature in church accommodation. The front of the gallery is an open balustrade. At the end of each pew is a wire grating in the floor for heating in Winter and ventilation in Summer. All these are connected, by means of air chambers under the floor, with an unseen shaft in the back part of the church, which is open from the foundation upward. Air shafts in the roof also communicate with this main shaft, and in the evenings the church will be lighted from six reflectors in the ceiling, all being helps to the ventilation, which is so arranged that it will carry off all foul air from the floor in the Summer time and diffuse warm air in the Winter. The walls are chastely shaded or tinted, an item in the general effect due to the excellent taste of Mr. Hansen. The organ case is built in thorough keeping with the style of the remainder of the structure, and is regarded by adepts in music to be one of the finest instruments ever made by JARDINE & SON. Its value is $8,000; it has thirty-nine stops, cresendo and pneumatic action. The seven lots on which the church and chapel stand were purchased in 1860 for $12,000. The building of the church cost $75,000, and the organ and furniture about $15,000 more. In addition to this the chapel and Sunday school-room will cost, when finished, about $15,000. The architect is Mr. R. L. ROGERS; the carpenter, Mr. CORNELIUS L. JOHNSON; masons, W. & T. LAMB; plumber and gasfitter, JOHN DRUNDEAU; upholsterer, Mr. BALDWIN, and the carpets were supplied by LATIMER. The pulpit furniture, which is entirely original in style, both desk and chairs, is the handiwork of Captain JOHN V. VANDEWATER, and, as a pulpit should do, it speaks for itself. The Building Committee, who have exercised the most exquisite judgment in their work, are Messrs. DANIEL GODWIN, JONATHAN S. BURR, JAS. M. COPPERSMITH, ELISHA WEST, CORNELIUS L. JOHNSON. These gentlemen were aided and much encouraged by the following Committee of the Church: Messrs. THOMAS TRUSLOW, J. VAN MESSEROLE, ALFRED CLOCK, JOHN W. VANDEWATER, HENRY LA FETRA, THEODORE JACKSON, SAMUEL SHONERARD, and ADAM CRAIG.

The opening sermon was preached yesterday by the able and devoted pastor, Rev. ELBERT S. PORTER, D. D., from the text: "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."—Rev. xxi., 3 and 4. The burden of the discourse was the permanency of Christianity, its indestructible elements, and what they are. The preacher urged that the Church here should be a type of the Church as it was to be hereafter. Here it should grow to its fullness and fruition. In the heaven-ly Church we would be free from pain and trial, and things to which we were subject here; at the same time, these experiences should cultivate us, and refine us, and elevate us in preparation for the heavenly Church. Having built a house of worship, each person should seek to make the Church such as it should be, so as to fulfill the desire of Christ, its great and living Head. They could accomplish this by laboring to comfort those who were in trouble; by having and cherishing such a sympathy as would lead them to feel the wants and woes of humanity, and not to exhibit or practice cold and repulsive exclusiveness. They should also cultivate such a largeness of heart and character as would show that they had no narrow sectarian prejudices. They should be seeking for good works, not merely holding the faith, but holding it forth.

In the evening Dr. PORTER preached from the text: "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us, and establish Thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish Thou it."—Psalm xc. 17.

There was a large congregation at each of the services.
